BPW Initiates 5 New Members

Five new members were initiated in a candlelight ceremony into the Business and Professional Women's Club at a dinner meeting in the Willard Hotel on Monday, October 21, by Wanda Elliott, membership chairman, assisted by Lilly White and Merle Calder. Those initiated were Bonnie J. Kelley, Maxine Cooper, Christine B. McCormick, Alpha L. Phelps and Anna B. Gough.

The impressive emblem ceremony, explained the club's blem, was presented by candlelight by several members of the club, with Leola Thompson as vocal soloist accompanied by Edna Book at the piano.

Preceding the initiation, a group from Leona Robertson's accordion band entertained with several lively selections.

The film, "United States Chamber of Commerce," was shown at the October 7 meeting of the club, with Frances Taylor in charge of this program.

Adoption Demand Exceeds Supply

By JANE EADS
WASHINGTON — More Americans want families today than ever before. The couples who can't have children want to adopt them. The sad thing is there are just not enough boys and girls to go around for all these would-be parents.

Adoptions are becoming increasingly popular and they are socially approved today. This is in sharp contrast to 25 years ago when adoptions were a hush-hush matter. The Children's Bureau estimates there were about 93,000 named in petitions for adoptions filed in courts in 1955. These included children adopted by relatives, or step-parents, though the majority were children adopted by non relatives.

The Children's Bureau figures there are 10 to 15 times as many families that want to adopt children than there are children legally relinquished by their parents for adoption. Some 80,000 families each year file petitions to adopt a child.

There have been statements that there are plenty of children to go around. Recent census figures show there are some 87,000 children in institutions for dependent and neglected children.

The Children's Bureau says there is no basis for belief that the great majority of these children could be adopted. Most have parents who have not relinquished them for adoption; some have mental or physical handicaps; many are older children.

Most are there because death or illness of one parent, or a divorce, has caused temporary removal from their own homes until new plans can be made. Unless a legal surrender is made by the parents, or ordered by a court, in case the parents are dead, these children cannot be adopted by anyone.

The largest percentage of these institution children also are around seven years of age or over. Some people want the 7, 10, or 12-year olds. A few can be persuaded to take 2, 3 or 4-year-olds. But most couples ask for babies.

OVER THE GARDEN GATE

NORTHSIDE GARDEN CLUB

The Northside Garden Club met at the clubhouse recently, with Opal Ferguson as hostess.

After the business meeting, Jim O'Donahue showed slides on wild animals, birds and flowers of Oregon. The next coffee will be with Edna Bowman, and a food sale will be held on Saturday November 9, at the Market Basket.

Langell Valley

MOTHER HONORED

Mrs. John Sullivan gave a luncheon at her home in upper Langell Valley in honor of her mother Mrs. Nellie Quick who was celebrating her 75th birthday. Sharing birthday honors was Mrs. Lloyd Gift of Langell Valley, and both women received many nice gifts.

Mrs. Mae Gale made and decorated the cake which centered the long table. Each guest was given a surprise package from Mrs.

Quick which contained crocheted doilies. Pinochle was played following the luncheon. Guests were Mrs. Quick and Lester Leavitt and the hostess.
