Every year at this time, new models appear on the market and the automobile industry gets a terrific lift. That's fine, as far as new car sales are concerned, but the annual problem is to keep our used car inventory under control. In order to continue giving high trade-ins on the new, new Chevy for '58, we must reduce our present stock of O.K. used cars. To do this we've cut prices on every car in stock.
