New School Measure Eyed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The Texas Legislature meets today to act on Gov. Price Daniel's recommendation for a law to close public schools threatened with control by state or federal troops.

The Legislature's second special session came on the heels of a first which in 30 days gave the governor substantially all that he had asked on lobby and influence control laws, a water planning measure, and a commission to study crime increase and law enforcement.

The troop-school bill suggested by Daniel is similar to a Florida law. It would provide that when violence or danger of violence "cannot be prevented except by resort to military force or occupation of a public school" the local board may close it.

It also provides that in the event National Guard or other troops are used on federal authority on school property or nearby to keep order, the board shall close the school until the troops are withdrawn.

The emergency clause of the bill declares that public education under martial law or military occupation is "contrary to the concepts of freedom and democracy" and that it would be harmful to children to attend public schools under the force and surveillance of military troops.

The session approved yesterday a resolution of displeasure over President Eisenhower's action in ordering federal troops into the Little Rock school integration battle. It also said the U. S. Supreme Court, in decisions following the anti-segregation ruling, had violated basic principles of states rights.

Safety Test Death Denied

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP)—A military physician-scientist denies a pig was killed yesterday in a demonstration to show U.S. auto makers how safety devices save humans.

About 100 representatives of car manufacturers are at the Air Force Missile Development Center, attending the third annual Automotive Crash and Field Demonstration Conference.

They saw two men and a bear undergo tests of violent deceleration, such as humans undergo in auto collisions.

An earlier report was that a pig was killed in one of the tests, but Col. John P. Stapp, head of the Aero-Medical Field Laboratory at the missile center, denied that. In a formal statement, he said: "It has been erroneously reported that a lap belt experiment was conducted . . . using an anesthetized pig."

"The facts are two volunteer human subjects, Capt. Eli L. Beeding and A.I.C. Gerald Johnson, were subjected to 27 to 15 times their body weight respectively with a lap belt or safety belt as the only restraint."

"In addition, one bear was decelerated at 20 G's, or 20 times its body weight."

"None of the subjects, human or animal, was adversely affected."
