"Jerk Day," a day of accepting the seventh grade into the student body, was held Friday, November 8, in the forenoon. To top the day of laughter, kangaroo court was held in the gymnasium by the boys student council.
Donna Simpson and LeRoy Paulson were accused of being too forward and were sentenced to hold hands with Dick Stevens and Kathleen Garlick.
Rosemary Chapman, unable to put her make-up on right, was shown how by Kent Cooper. When he finished, she was "really made up."
Judith Hamilton and Sharon Lapsley were accused of not being able to ride horses so their penalty was to ride a stick horse around the gym.
Long noses, belonging to Jack Faulkner and Mike Preston, caused them to roll peanuts across the gym floor to end their noisiness.
To end the court, Sandra Woodard, Lynetta Kunz, Jeanne Curry, and Donna Williams ran a relay to get dressed in all sorts of clothing and then run across the gym.
To end the program, the girls of the student council launched a "Jerknik," and with it a strange being called "Ima Jerk."
