By LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

There is a city board of health answerable to the city council, and a county board of health answerable to the county court of three members. The city-county health officer is a doctor. The sanitarian also serves the city-county. These boards meet approximately once a month. The state only exercises authority over the municipality in emergencies, except that they must approve the city's sanitary facilities (sewage and water supply).

A county public health nursing service is under the direction of the county doctor. Nurses operate with the city schools. They do the only health education outside of the Public Health Department, examine children in the schools, and if necessary, recommend further examinations by the family physicians and dentists. They visit homes which need their help within those school areas. There is no special arrangement for maternal and infant care, except through prepaid insurance.

The only clinic setup for people of small means is in the field of mental health. There is a County Nursing Home which serves mainly welfare patients. It is mainly for convalescent and chronic conditions.

All of the water for the city of Klamath Falls is from artesian wells. The water is tested weekly. The federal government requires a minimum of chlorine added to all drinking water.

All milk and meat sold in Klamath Falls is inspected by inspectors (veterinarians) answerable to the city council. There is a pasteurization ordinance. Food handlers do not pass health tests (these have become mere issuing of health cards for money in some areas, so are not considered practical). There is regular inspection of restaurants by the sanitarian. It is claimed there are no rats in Klamath Falls.

Public welfare is a federal, state and county function. The County Public Welfare Commission is supervised by the State Public Welfare Commission. The county commission is composed of four members appointed by the governor, two county commissioners and the county judge. Their qualifications are a knowledge and an interest in Public Welfare. The duties of the County Public Welfare Commission are to administer public assistance in the county subject to the supervision and rules of the State Welfare Commission; to employ people who are qualified in accordance with the rules and regulations of the State Merit System; to keep records and accounts of the expenditures of money, county, state and federal, and to make reports to the State Public Welfare Commission. Since public welfare is a county function, a more detailed survey will be made when the county is studied.

There are two hospitals in Klamath Falls, which serve an area of about 50,000 population. In an interview with a committee from the League of Women Voters, the administrator for the hospital corporation stated that there are 147 beds available in the two hospitals. While there may be times when the hospitals are nearly full, the average occupancy on a yearly basis is 54 per cent. In discussing emergency and disaster care, it was stated that expansion of emergency facilities was under consideration. He added that rising costs may make such improvements financially impractical.

Police Arrest Runaway Youths

Two teen-age boys, 16 and 17, from El Segundo, California, were arrested by Oregon State Police in Chiloquin early Wednesday morning and charged with running away from home. In the meantime, Justice of the Peace Walter Zimmerman said he believed that the youths may have been responsible for a couple of attempted burglaries last night.

Juvenile Officer Francis Mathews said that the boys had said they were on their way to Canada for a fishing expedition. Mathews added that he had called the father of the 17-year-old youth, who said that his son did not have permission to take part in a fishing expedition.

Mathews quoted the father as saying that he had attempted several times to break up the relations between his son and the younger boy.

The juvenile officer added he would question the boys later this afternoon.

ROAD REPORT

No new snow was reported on state highways except over the McKenzie Pass in the last 24 hours, according to the Klamath Falls office of the Oregon State Motor Association. Traffic was going over Highway 26 and the Willamette Pass without chains this morning; packed snow, well sanded.
