Off-Street Parking Plan

(Continued from Page one) meters was currently being used for police, traffic and street lighting purposes, all of which benefited the downtown area.

Ed Bell, chairman of the City Budget Committee, itemized the purposes for which the city was utilizing parking meter funds, and then pointed out that, in his estimation, it was wrong to channel the money from the parking meters and the occupation taxes into other departments.

"The homeowners must kick-in their share," he continued, "to protect the downtown area. It's a very serious situation. As chairman of the budget committee," he summarized, "I would recommend we approve this request for use of the parking meter funds and the occupation taxes for off-street parking."

would be more proper to ask voters for a five mill levy for off-street parking purposes.

The council took no action on the request at this meeting.

PARK AND RECREATION

Another delegation of members of the City Park and Recreation committees appeared to request that a measure be put on the May ballot asking an increase of one mill levy each for both the Park and the Recreation departments.

Councilman James Barnes who represents the council on the Park and Recreation committees, pointed out that the operating monies of both departments have been constantly on the decrease while the request for services has been increasing.

"Our per capita average for parks and recreation," Barnes said, "has decreased from $3.70 in 1953 to $2.67 in 1957."

Stan Miller, member of the commission, stated that the increased levies are necessary if the people want to maintain and keep in good repair the facilities they presently have.

Martin Brauner, another board member, pointed out that the city is trying to attract people, and that an adequate park and recreation program is important.

Mayor Slater commented that requests for additional funds have come also from the police and fire departments, from the airport committee for a new terminal building, as well as new money for the street department for a new shop. He also speculated that there had been consideration of the city purchasing a paving plant, and other financial needs.

"It is the council's feeling," he concluded, "that with business in Oregon as it is, that it would be ill-advised to put measures on the May ballot asking for increased funds."

Other Action

In other action the city council: 1. Awarded equipment bids for units needed in the primary sewage treatment plant which will be built by the H. G. Carl Construction Company of Salem at a cost of $288,386.29.

2. Approved the blocking of Fifth Street from Kinlock to Willow for the balance of the inclement winter weather.

3. Ordered the city engineer to investigate prospects of paving Mesa Street from Auburn to Huron as requested by a petition presented to the council.
