Let's Draw A Fish

Ann Davidow

X marks the spot
Where the fish gets caught.

W tall
Makes tail and all.

Lines straight and thin
Will show each fin.

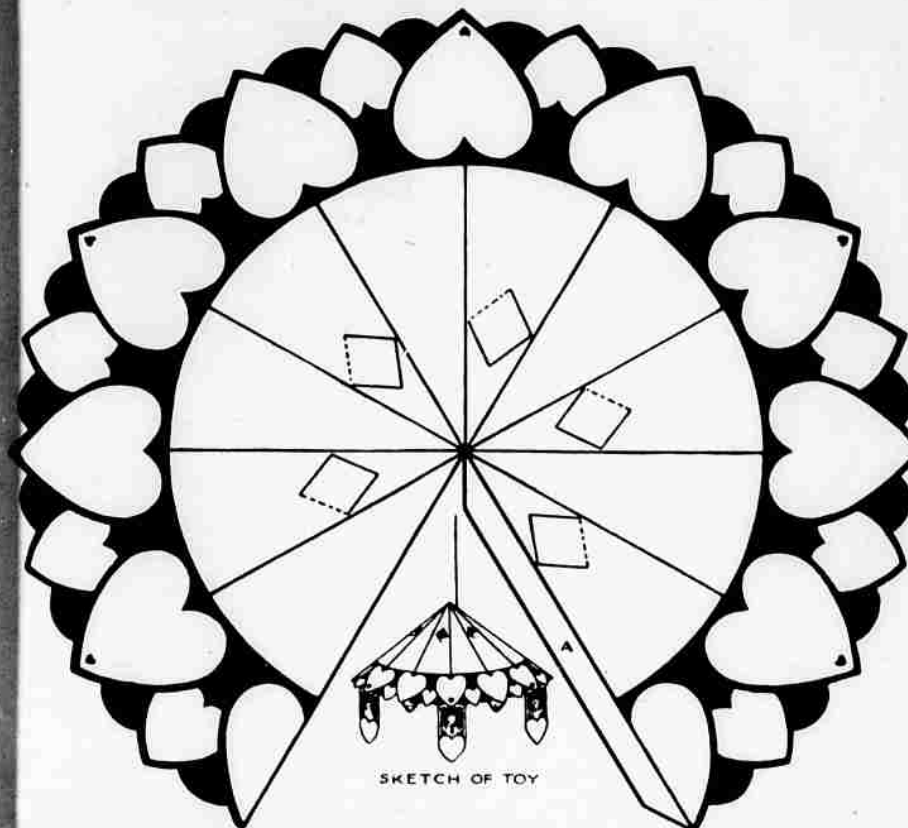

A worm and hook,
And soon he'll cook!

Here Comes Cupid!

Nat Bradford

One player is Cupid and stands in the center of a circle of players or "Valentines." Cupid calls, "I want Valentines! Here comes Cupid!" The Valentines then run in every direction and Cupid chases them. If he catches a Valentine, that one stands in the center of the circle during the next game and helps Cupid catch the others. The last Valentine to be caught is the winner.

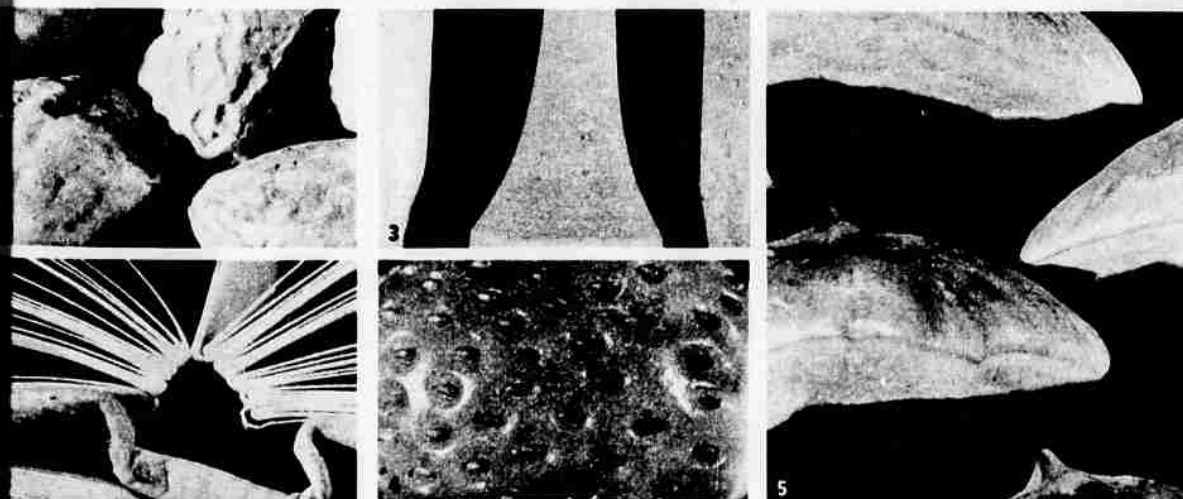

A Valentine Vehicle

By John Dukes McKee

To make this merry-go-round, mount the page on strong paper. Make the five small pieces for swings and the large piece for the canopy. Make the ventilator holes in the top, as shown, and bend flaps inward. Bring the two edges of the canopy together and paste the flap "A" underneath. Paste the swings just underneath the edge of each of the largest hearts marked with a small black heart. Now get a piece of fine thread about two feet long and make a good big knot at one end. Run your needle through the black dot close to the center from underneath the mounted page.

Hang the toy over a hot-air register, radiator, or stove. In just a moment it will start to revolve, just as the big merry-go-rounds do. When the thread has twisted itself so tightly that the toy will not revolve, remove it from the draft of hot air and it will unwind just as fast.
