

Bonanza Whips Trojans

Antlers Capture 64-36 Win

COUNTY B LEAGUE
Malin	1,000
Merrill	2,000
Chiloquin	3,000
Bonanza	4,000
Sacred Heart	5,000
Gilchrist	6,000

Coach Erwin Ellis' Bonanza Antlers, again led by Ron Roberts, bounced Sacred Heart's Trojans 64-36 in a Klamath County B League basketball game played Friday night at Sacred Heart.

The Antlers moved to a 11-4 first quarter lead and the Trojans were behind the rest of the way. Gary Atwood sparked Bonanza to its first period lead with six points, all from the field.

Bonanza moved ahead 24-19 at the end of the first half and by the start of the fourth quarter was in command 36-20. A gigantic 26-point fourth quarter "iced" the game for the visiting Antlers.

Roberts, who has sparked the Bonanza cause game after game, again led the scoring, picking up 24 points. Roberts hit for nine points in the big fourth-quarter uprising by Bonanza.

Other Antler scoring in the final period was turned in by Jim Dayley and Bobby Toffel each with four points and Dan Nork with five. Atwood picked up two more points in the last period to finish the game with 18.

Sacred Heart's scoring was led by Tom Amberg and George Hurley. Both SHC cagers hit for 12 points.

In the preliminary game, Sacred Heart's Jayvees walked away with a 39-23 victory over the Bonanza Jayvees.

SUMMARY:
BONANZA (41) — Ellis 1, Douglas 1, Toffel 4, Roberts 24, Dayley 4, Atwood 18, Strunk 2, Nork 3, Jacobs.
SACRED HEART (36) — Horn 1, Amberg 12, Debel 2, Hurley 12, Folk 2, Anderson, Wilkinson 4, Brumble 2, Powell, Kirk 2.

Malin Quint Snares 101-30 Cage Victory

Coach Jack McGoldrick's Malin Mustangs went out on a scoring spree Friday night at Gilchrist to blast the host Grizzlies 101-30 in a lopsided Klamath County B League basketball game.

The 101 points run up by the Mustangs is a Malin High School scoring record.

The Malin cagers—nine of the 11 who played scored—hit at a flashy .500 per cent from the field as they completely outclassed the undermanned Gilchrist quintet. Six Malin players tallied in double figures.

Bill Rajnus spearheaded the Malin attack with 23 points. Others who hit in two figures were Farrell Wilson 11, Jim Toffel 12, Mel Kenyon 12, Benny Hall 12 and Jack Freeman with 11. Hall and Freeman were reserves.

At the end of the first quarter Malin led 27-12. The halftime score was 48-16. At the close of the third period, Malin was out in front 71-21. With three minutes gone in the game, Gilchrist was down 10-6 then faded fast under the Malin attack. Malin also won the jayvee game, 67-20.

SUMMARY:
MALIN (101) — B. Rajnus 23, Wilson 11, Toffel 12, Miller 12, Kenyon 12, J. Rajnus 6, Hall 12, Steyskal 7, Freeman 11, Kowdler 10, Larson 17, Russell 2, Brewer 6, Emery, Barry 4, G. Warren 3, J. Warren.

Alaska Bowler To Attend Joust

Mrs. Don (Sally) Hitchcock, Spearhead, Alaska, near Anchorage, now secretary of the Anchorage Women's Bowling League, is one of six women from Alaska to be chosen to attend the Women's National Bowling Tournament in San Francisco in April.

Mrs. Hitchcock is well known as a bowler in Klamath Falls, having lived here at one time. Her husband is employed by Morrison-Knudsen on a construction project in Alaska. Bowling is becoming increasingly popular in the country. She will make the trip south by air.

Wildcats Win

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 9 (AP) — Kentucky blew Mississippi out of contention early and coasted to a 96-65 victory Saturday to maintain its lead in the Southeastern Conference basketball race.

Volunteers Vault

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 9 (AP) — Tennessee defeated Mississippi State, 104-83, Saturday to keep its Southeastern Conference basketball title hopes alive.

Don't Knock Floyd — Weill

NEW YORK (NEA) — "All I know," Al Weill snorted, "is that Patterson don't have to tie across the sidewalk if Eddie Machen or Zora Foley or any of them other fighters come along. He'll knock out Machen and Foley and Willie Pastrano and all of them."

The man who put Rocky Marciano into a title was accused as he displayed his latest snarl of clothes to the patrons of Dempsey's Restaurant.

"Look, what Cus D'Amato does

GOING HIGH FOR a rebound is Sacred Heart's Andre DeBel (10) and Bonanza's Tom Ellis (11) during Friday night's Klamath County B League basketball game played at Sacred Heart gym. Watching the action is Tom Amberg (22) and Arnie Krok (34) of Sacred Heart. Bonanza players watching are Dan Nork and Bobby Toffel (23). Bonanza won the game 64-36.

Merrill Posts 67-45 Win Over Chiloquin

Merrill put together three good scoring quarters, the second, third and fourth, to pull out a Klamath County B League basketball victory over the Chiloquin Panthers, 67-45, in a game played at Merrill.

The win pushed the Huskies into a second place tie with idle Bly. Both teams own 7-3 league records.

Merrill moved ahead 10-7 after a slow first quarter. Then coach Al Keck's Huskies picked up the pace and held a 27-19 halftime lead. With the help of a 20-point third quarter Merrill out ran the visiting Panthers to a 47-31 third quarter lead. Another 20 points in the final period staggered Chiloquin.

Three of the Merrill starters tallied in double figures while the Husky defense stopped all but Steve Pope for Chiloquin. Bud Maupin fired in 23 points to lead Merrill's attack and the game scoring. Doug Everson chipped in 16 points and Perry Laney added 15. Pope was the Panthers' big gun with 18 points, the only Chiloquin player to break into double figures.

Bruck Brickner and Maupin led Merrill's second period attack with six points each. In the third quarter, Everson, who had scored only two points in the first half, broke loose for a 10-point effort while Maupin accounted for six more. Maupin added eight more to his credit in the final frame with Laney adding six.

SUMMARY:
CHILQUIN (45) — Parazon 6, Ravizza 5, Pope 18, Ochoa 4, Sandoval, Guenther, Heseock 4, Haggarth 3, Hall.
MERRILL (67) — Brickner 8, Maupin 23, Everson 16, Laney 15, Haskins 2, Raines.

TIME OUT

"Okay, instructor, now that we're up here when do I learn how to ski down..."

Wilt Nets 46

LAWRENCE, Kan., Feb. 9 (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain scored 46 points in leading Kansas to a record-shattering 102 to 46 Big Eight Conference basketball victory over Nebraska Saturday.

Bradley Tumbles
STILLWATER, Okla., Feb. 9 (AP) — Oklahoma State took the lead from Bradley with six minutes left in the first half and went on to win the non-conference game 64-32 Saturday.

MOSS PICKS CAR
LONDON (UPI) — Shirley Moss, Great Britain's top driver, will drive an Aston-Martin car in the sports car races at Sebring, Fla. The auto firm announced today.

MOSS CO-DRIVER will be Tony Brooks.

UCLA Schedules
LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9 (AP) — UCLA will play Penn State's football team Sept. 28, 1963, at University Park, Pa., and the Nittany Lions will come here for a game against the Bruins Sept. 28, 1964.

UCLA Athletic Director Wilbur Johns announced the home-and-home series Saturday. The 1964 game will mark the first appearance of Penn State on the West Coast since 1948. They played in the Pasadena Rose Bowl in 1923, losing to Southern California.

NCS Triumphant
RALEIGH, Feb. 9 (AP) — Ninth-ranked North Carolina State maintained its first place lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a one-sided 86-55 win over South Carolina here Saturday.

Spartans Bounced
BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 9 (AP) — Indiana's Hoosiers knocked Michigan State's Spartans out of the Big Ten basketball lead Saturday, 82-79, in spite of a 23-point performance by the losers' Larry Heden.

Wilson added: "The university

Fraley's Facts, Figures

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fearless Fraley's facts and figures:

Lanky Don Budge, the former number one tennis ace, has two sons — and neither likes tennis. Don admits resignedly that both are baseball bugs.

"I'd like them to play tennis," he admits, "but I won't try to influence them. Still, if they asked me, I'd jump at the chance to teach them." ... imagine trying to fill the old man's shoes.

Coincidence: Jim Norris, who was ordered in federal court to disband his International Boxing Club monopoly, has a race horse at Hialeah named "Octopus." ... another matter of tentacles.

YOUNG COACHING STAFF
The University of Utah football coaching staff is touted as one of the nation's youngest, with a four-man average age of 29, but the quartet has 14 offspring among them.

Willie (The Beard) Gilzenberg, who once piloted Two-Ton Tony Galento, now is running razzlin' shows in Newark, N.J. Willie, who did a magnificent build-up job on the Newark nightstick, is using press agency right out of the Roaring 20's on his "athletes." Get a load of this recent paragraph:

"Four leading wrestling Russians will clash head-on in the tag team set. This long-awaited duel will pit destructive Jerry Graham and punning Roy Shires against the two tough, terrific colosses, Canadian Greek grippers. ... awesome, what?"

Pro basketball observers don't expect Lennie Rosenblyth, the former North Carolina All-American now with the Philadelphia Warriors, to last long in pro basketball. They observe that he's "only" six feet, four and too fragile to mix it up in the pier six scrimmages.

DID THE SHOT GO IN
All the actors aren't on Broadway. Jack Twyman of the Cincinnati Royals was decked recently firing a jump shot. A teammate who he knew Twyman was okay when he opened his eyes and asked, "Did the shot go in?"

"He didn't even get up," grinned coach Bobby Wanzer, "until he was told he had two free throws coming."

Veteran golf pro Al Watrous tells the one about two women walking down the fairway and talking up a storm. Finally they came to the only ball in sight and both claimed ownership.

"It's mine," said one.
"No," asserted the other, "it's mine. See, here are my initials on it."

The other felt in her pocket and then, her face lighting up, exclaimed: "For goodness sake, here's mine. We were so busy talking I didn't even hit off the tee..." yak-yak!

Tucson Led By January
TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 9 (AP) — Don January, Eastland, Tex., played the best golf of his career Saturday to take the third round lead in the $15,000 Tucson Open golf tournament.

January had a 54-hole total of 198, 12-under par.

The Texas youngster played the last nine holes in a chilly rain but came in with a 6-under-par 64 for the 6,434-yard El Rio Country Club course.

Lionel Hebert, Lafayette, La., the current PGA champion, played "as good golf as I can play" for a 66 Saturday and a third-round total of 199.

Tony Lema, Napa, Calif., who shared the 36-hole lead with Bill Johnston, Provo, Utah, was tied at 201 with Jim Higgins, Anderson, S. C.

Johnston was hit on the left elbow by Stan Leonard's driver when the Vancouver, B. C., golfer took a practice swing on the second tee. Johnston complained of pain the rest of the round and his score soared to 75, dropping him far behind with a 54-hole total of 296.

Bob Duden, Oswego, Ore., and Jerry Barber, Los Angeles, were four strokes behind the leaders at 202.

Leonard followed at 204.

UCLA Schedules
LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9 (AP) — UCLA will play Penn State's football team Sept. 28, 1963, at University Park, Pa., and the Nittany Lions will come here for a game against the Bruins Sept. 28, 1964.

UCLA Athletic Director Wilbur Johns announced the home-and-home series Saturday. The 1964 game will mark the first appearance of Penn State on the West Coast since 1948. They played in the Pasadena Rose Bowl in 1923, losing to Southern California.

NCS Triumphant
RALEIGH, Feb. 9 (AP) — Ninth-ranked North Carolina State maintained its first place lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a one-sided 86-55 win over South Carolina here Saturday.

Spartans Bounced
BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 9 (AP) — Indiana's Hoosiers knocked Michigan State's Spartans out of the Big Ten basketball lead Saturday, 82-79, in spite of a 23-point performance by the losers' Larry Heden.

Wilson added: "The university

Either Change 'Em

Rule Makers Still Experimenting

By JACK HEWINS
Associated Press Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — After all, there are only two things you can do with rules: (1) change them; (2) leave 'em alone.

You have to sympathize with the guys who make rules. Everybody wants to change the regulations but everybody also has his own ideas on what the changes should be. When the football thinkers put in that two-point-after-touchdown gimmick this year they became unpopular with 99 per cent of the people who didn't think of it first.

Both the basketball and football rules committees have been tinkering and experimenting for nigh onto 50 years and haven't managed to ruin either game. At times it has looked like they were trying, especially in basketball.

Attempting to be hoop Houdinis

and make the big man disappear, the men who make basketball rules have tried everything but an axe. And the result? Twenty years ago a 6-foot-4 player was a rare monster and coaches were afraid to allow him on the court lest he trip over the foul lines.

Now he has to be agile as a cat to make the team and the same coach wouldn't be able to face his schedule unless he had three players over 6-5 on his front line. And the coach is really hurting if one of the three doesn't soar to 6-8 or 6-10.

In their search for a way to avoid tie games—the chief reason for the new football scoring rule—it's surprising the boys didn't go for the Canadian rouge. In case you're not familiar with the term, it has nothing to do with pancake makeup.

Any ball kicked into the end zone counts a point if not carried back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep the ball.

And you're hearing a lot of argument nowadays for a return to the center jump — undoubtedly coming from people who never jumped center. In the ancient days you made that long haul from the backboard to the center circle after every basket, strained for the tipoff and then galloped down the floor to keep your place in the pattern.

Centers were men of iron and some of us, still climbing the rust from our thinning hair, would never wish the job off on the nice kids now playing. Boosters for the center jump forget that the team with the best jumper controlled the ball from start to finish.

For playing or watching, it's a better game today.

Back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep the ball.

And you're hearing a lot of argument nowadays for a return to the center jump — undoubtedly coming from people who never jumped center. In the ancient days you made that long haul from the backboard to the center circle after every basket, strained for the tipoff and then galloped down the floor to keep your place in the pattern.

Centers were men of iron and some of us, still climbing the rust from our thinning hair, would never wish the job off on the nice kids now playing. Boosters for the center jump forget that the team with the best jumper controlled the ball from start to finish.

For playing or watching, it's a better game today.

Back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep the ball.

And you're hearing a lot of argument nowadays for a return to the center jump — undoubtedly coming from people who never jumped center. In the ancient days you made that long haul from the backboard to the center circle after every basket, strained for the tipoff and then galloped down the floor to keep your place in the pattern.

Centers were men of iron and some of us, still climbing the rust from our thinning hair, would never wish the job off on the nice kids now playing. Boosters for the center jump forget that the team with the best jumper controlled the ball from start to finish.

For playing or watching, it's a better game today.

Back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep the ball.

And you're hearing a lot of argument nowadays for a return to the center jump — undoubtedly coming from people who never jumped center. In the ancient days you made that long haul from the backboard to the center circle after every basket, strained for the tipoff and then galloped down the floor to keep your place in the pattern.

Centers were men of iron and some of us, still climbing the rust from our thinning hair, would never wish the job off on the nice kids now playing. Boosters for the center jump forget that the team with the best jumper controlled the ball from start to finish.

For playing or watching, it's a better game today.

Back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Or Leave 'Em Alone

Rule Makers Still Experimenting

By JACK HEWINS
Associated Press Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — After all, there are only two things you can do with rules: (1) change them; (2) leave 'em alone.

You have to sympathize with the guys who make rules. Everybody wants to change the regulations but everybody also has his own ideas on what the changes should be. When the football thinkers put in that two-point-after-touchdown gimmick this year they became unpopular with 99 per cent of the people who didn't think of it first.

Both the basketball and football rules committees have been tinkering and experimenting for nigh onto 50 years and haven't managed to ruin either game. At times it has looked like they were trying, especially in basketball.

Attempting to be hoop Houdinis

and make the big man disappear, the men who make basketball rules have tried everything but an axe. And the result? Twenty years ago a 6-foot-4 player was a rare monster and coaches were afraid to allow him on the court lest he trip over the foul lines.

Now he has to be agile as a cat to make the team and the same coach wouldn't be able to face his schedule unless he had three players over 6-5 on his front line. And the coach is really hurting if one of the three doesn't soar to 6-8 or 6-10.

In their search for a way to avoid tie games—the chief reason for the new football scoring rule—it's surprising the boys didn't go for the Canadian rouge. In case you're not familiar with the term, it has nothing to do with pancake makeup.

Any ball kicked into the end zone counts a point if not carried back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep the ball.

And you're hearing a lot of argument nowadays for a return to the center jump — undoubtedly coming from people who never jumped center. In the ancient days you made that long haul from the backboard to the center circle after every basket, strained for the tipoff and then galloped down the floor to keep your place in the pattern.

Centers were men of iron and some of us, still climbing the rust from our thinning hair, would never wish the job off on the nice kids now playing. Boosters for the center jump forget that the team with the best jumper controlled the ball from start to finish.

For playing or watching, it's a better game today.

Back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep the ball.

And you're hearing a lot of argument nowadays for a return to the center jump — undoubtedly coming from people who never jumped center. In the ancient days you made that long haul from the backboard to the center circle after every basket, strained for the tipoff and then galloped down the floor to keep your place in the pattern.

Centers were men of iron and some of us, still climbing the rust from our thinning hair, would never wish the job off on the nice kids now playing. Boosters for the center jump forget that the team with the best jumper controlled the ball from start to finish.

For playing or watching, it's a better game today.

Back on, the field of play—that's a rouge. Under U. S. rules the ball is handed over to the defense at its own 20-yard line—a gift of room to operate for a team which actually deserves to be in trouble.

After they put the goal posts back on the goal line for the college players, restore the two-platoon system and outlaw the split-T, football will be in pretty good shape.

Arguments over basketball rules have been centering lately around a time limit for shooting. The pros are given 24 seconds to try for a score; collegians have all evening. Sometimes they take it. The rules makers agree something should be done to eliminate late-game stalling, but they abhor borrowing an idea from the pros.

Okay. A team now is granted 10 seconds to get the ball across the center line. Let's extend the foul lines entirely across the court and give them another 10 seconds to cross that. Any team which can operate a stall inside such a restricted space deserves to keep