Somebody once said "if you can't lick 'em, join 'em." And that's just about the way I have come to feel about daylight saving time on the Pacific Coast.
It won't be long now before the old battle will start all over again with the neighboring states to the north and south both making a switch to the fast time while poor old Oregon fuddles and fumbles along in a never ending horror of missed trains, frazzled nerves and general confusion.
Over the years I have been opposed to daylight saving time because I failed to see where it accomplished its stated purpose—that of giving the working man an additional hour of daylight in the afternoon. I have maintained that getting up an hour earlier and leaving the clocks where they were would accomplish this same thing with far less trouble and national, regional and local confusion.

Let me say that I reasoned thus and hoped thus back in the days when I thought there was enough inherent sanity in the voting public to effect such a measure.

I have come, however, to the reluctant conclusion that I am whipped and that daylight saving time is here to stay. People will get up an hour earlier if they fool themselves into thinking that eight o'clock is really nine o'clock and vice versa, and not otherwise.

And taking that into consideration I am quite willing to admit that I'm whipped and join the opposition. At the expense of admitting defeat I'll come out and say that we should start the agitation again for a vote on the subject and see if there is some hope of relief for us border people.

It doesn't make so much difference to the people who live in the central part of the state. Their daily lives are not disrupted by the factors involved in doing daily business over a border, on the other side of which you find everyone either an hour ahead of you or an hour behind.

But to those of us who live on the border, and particularly to those of us who deliver daily across that imaginary line that causes all the trouble, the problems are great and numerous. And nearly insurmountable in many cases.

I guess the thing to do is haul up our belts and see if we can't do something about getting at least the whole Pacific Coast if not the whole nation on the same time schedule.

Wrong Impression

By FLOYD L. WYNNE
It was highly interesting to attend the opening of bids on some Klamath allotted lands at Klamath Agency on Tuesday of this week.

There were about 40 bids submitted in all, Leroy Geinger of Chiloquin submitting 14 and Weyerhaeuser Timber Company had offered seven.

There were as high as three and four bids for some of the timbered tracts, and they ranged from a high of over $38,000 down to a low of $257.

The allotted lands are those that have been granted to private Indian ownership.

An appraisal figure has been worked out on all the allotments offered for sale, and bids must equal or exceed the appraisal figure otherwise they will not be accepted.

Of the 40 bids, only two were found to be acceptable.

One member of the tribe visited me yesterday and pointed out a point in the story of the bid opening in the Wednesday edition that might have created some erroneous impressions.

One of the two bids that were successful was a $4,767 bid by Leroy Geinger on an allotment that was approximately 48½ acres owned by William Juda Jim. The figure of the bid and the acreage was correct, but it did not mention in the story that the acreage included some 193,000 board feet of ponderosa pine. The land itself is usable as meadow pasture, and timber production purposes.

The person who visited me had an excellent point. He said that just stating the price was $4,767 for a 48.5 acre tract would make people think that the Indians were getting around $100 per acre for land that was not even farming land. He pointed out, correctly, that even if the 193,000 board feet of ponderosa pine were valued as low as $22 per thousand, the 48 acres of land itself would have cost the buyer only a little more than $500.

The point is important because many persons have somehow gotten several wrong ideas about the Indians and their income. In the first place, they are not on a dole system from the government. They participate only in their share of the money gotten from sales of Indian timber, leases etc.

The allotted lands are private lands separate from the reservation, and are sold on an individual basis.

However, the appraisal figures of the lands being bid on are not available to bidders. This fact accounts for the point that only two bids out of 40 were found to be acceptable. There is a necessity for protecting the Indians against exploitation of their lands, and these bid sales are one of the best ways, it seems to me.

Incidentally, the final session of these bid sales is expected to be held sometime in April. All allotment sales must be completed prior to August of this year.

I came away with the distinct impression that Elmo Miller, agency superintendent, and his very capable crew were doing an excellent devoted job of protecting the interests and caring for the needs of the Indians under their jurisdiction.

average of $125, but range from $39 to $1,800. Van Drill himself says a bride can do right nicely for $69.

Brides are the best people in the world to deal with," said Van Drill. "They are approaching one of the most emotional moments of their lives, and they are deeply grateful for any help you give them."

The bride he remembers most is one he never met. She sent a brand new wedding dress, lovely and shimmering, to be preserved and sealed in foil. With it came this note:

"I want to keep it all my life. It has never been worn and never will be. My fiancé was killed in a plane crash on the way to our wedding."

Reading Lessons

By UNITED PRESS
CHICAGO — Three fifth-grade suburban Skokie teachers and their principal grew tired of the endless battle over why some students could not read as well as others.

They decided that fifth-graders who appeared to be fairly bright but lagged in reading ability needed only the right person to help them. And they decided the "right person" was a teacher.

So they planned a remedial program. Hard work, novel ideas and understanding paid off. Only in one case did the study plan fail, and that involved a boy whose progress indicated the necessity for a basic metabolism test and possibly psychiatric guidance.

The teachers set aside four days a week for a remedial reading period. They used tape recorders, film strips, special recordings, and above all hard work, to guide their charges to better reading. Even language games were used in the search for materials to make reading interesting.

The teachers found tape recorders a valuable aid. The children told stories about themselves that were recorded, reproduced and given back to the children with all the spoken mistakes unchanged.

When each child read his own story from the printed page, he easily pronounced words he would not have attempted before. The method proved one of the best ways to put the speaking vocabulary to work to help the reading vocabulary.

In two and one-half months each student showed a marked advance in reading ability.

The teachers shrug off the added work. They feel they were well rewarded for their efforts.

They said that not only was reading ability improved, but there were many other benefits.

They said returned confidence was expressed by straightened shoulders of the students as they walked down the hall, by a smile for teacher and by a lessening of the need to cause trouble among schoolmates.

The teachers believe the remedial reading classes helped their students discover inner discipline and encouraged them to become happier, more skilled, more self-confident individuals.
