Notebook Sacred Heart

By ANN SARGENT The annual "Courtney Campaign" is being held during February by academy students as well as other Catholic schools in the Baker diocese. This year each class is planning a separate project to carry the results of this season into permanent habits. For their project the seniors selected by secret ballot four "spotters" from their class to mark down the courteous acts performed during the day by each senior. The sophomores began their drive during the regular class meeting on Monday during activity period when reports on courtesy were made by Susan Bray, Joylene Georges, John Novak, and Eleanor Snyder. All students are preparing for the Iowa Test which will be given early in March. This achievement test, covering four years of high school studies, will determine the academy's scholastic rating with other secondary schools around the nation. Subjects to be covered by the examination will include English grammar, geography, history, literature, mathematics, reading, reference, and thinking processes. Aiding the destitute in Europe, SHA students are asked to support the annual Bishop's Relief Fund. Class rivalry is encouraged to swell this fund which provides food, clothing, and shelter for the needy. A fashion show was the main topic at the Sodality meeting, held on Wednesday morning. On March 9 the Sodality will model clothes supplied by several apparel shops in this area. Two shows are planned—one for the SHA students and the other for the public. Deanna Louie is the chairman of this project.

Store Theft Problem Cited

Thousands upon thousands of dollars are lost by business firms in every town across the land because of the activities of shoplifters, short change artists, till tappers and credit union bunco deals. Richard Young of the Berkeley Police Department told members of the Quota Club of Klamath County at its regular Tuesday luncheon at the Winema this week. Young is here to make a survey of the police department of Klamath Falls at the request of the city council. He was introduced at the meeting by Hap Lawler of the Merchants Credit Service, program chairman for February. Eternal vigilance is necessary to keep theft losses to a minimum, the speaker told the business women present. Professional shoplifters usually concentrate their efforts in metropolitan areas, he said, and told about an elderly woman whose entire house was furnished with stolen merchandise. She also had a cache of some $30,000 which police determined had been stolen. Less populous areas are plagued by the amateurs, as a rule, he added. Shoplifting often starts with youngsters as young as 10 years of age, but they usually find candy bar counters and five and 10 cent stores their most attractive hunting grounds. Careful policing by the sales and administrative staffs of stores usually controls these deceptions. Short change artists who endeavor to confuse the cashier making change are found working as individuals or in teams all over the country and many of them are apprehended each year, he said. Till tappers and shoplifters frequently suffer from kleptomania, he added, which disease is usually brought to light by law enforcement officers after arrests.

Top Violinist Slates Concert

Wayne Angel, well known violinist who received his basic training in Klamath Falls, will appear in concert with the Klamath Union High School Symphony Orchestra on February 27. The presentation will begin at 8 p.m. in the Mills auditorium. Angel was born in Louisiana and at an early age moved with his family to Klamath Falls. His record from early grade school days is a constant succession of competitions won and successes in concerts. In 1953 he moved to Portland for his senior year at Grant High School and also entered University of Portland as a special student. He is now a junior at Portland State College and after graduation plans to do further study at New England Conservatory in Boston, Massachusetts. The last five years has seen an amazing succession of brilliant recitals in Portland and Northwest cities. In 1955, as a northwest district finalist in the federated music clubs contest, Angel won the national finals in the violin division by his performance of the Mozart A Major violin concerto. The contest was held in Chicago, Illinois. In 1956 he was selected as one of two young West Coast artists to appear in recital in Phoenix, Arizona on the National Music Teachers Association convention program. His appearances everywhere have been in the nature of a sensation due to his superb technical command of his instrument and to his flair for expressive playing. In 1955 he attracted the attention of Mr. Bloomfield, conductor of the Portland Symphony, who heard him play in recital and since then he has been a member of the Portland Symphony first violin section. Being only 19 years of age, at the time of his appointment, symphony records will prove Angel to be the youngest member to ever play with the Portland Symphony first violin section since its founding in 1911. At the present time Wayne is studying with the well known artist coach Rex Underwood who was the former president of American String Teachers Association. His early musical training was under Mr. Harry Borel of Klamath Falls, Oregon. In the coming concert Angel will be playing a highly valued 161-year-old violin known as the Tate Strad model Vincenzo Parnormo. It was made by Parnormo in London in 1797, and was the subject of a recent article in the magazine Violin and Violinists.

KC Child Guidance Council

The Klamath County Child Guidance Advisory Council meeting on Wednesday noon at the Klamath County health offices drew an attendance of about 30 members who represent a cross section of the citizens of Klamath County. The board acts as liaison between the mental health department of the public health service and the community. Its membership includes persons representing constituted authority, however, including the juvenile department, welfare, county health department and the school system. Most of the members are mothers or fathers. Mrs. E. A. Geary, chairman of the group, brought up the subject of the current disturbance at Klamath Union High School, pointing out that the advisory council has no authority as a group, but the individual concern of the members warranted a discussion. Opinions expressed at the meeting backed up the firm stand taken by the juvenile department, the state and city police and the sheriff's office that juvenile offenders will be severely dealt with. "Until complete order is restored," a former high school teacher said, "I believe that restriction on the use of automobiles by high school students can be enforced. It would cost less to make a study of the high school transportation set-up than to process the cases of several juvenile offenders. Where an automobile is necessary for transportation, the keys to the car could be checked at the school office at the start of the school day and returned at its conclusion," he said. Disapproval was expressed over the fact that high school students appear to make it a practice of driving around the city streets during normal school hours. "Policing of the school grounds to eliminate the presence of persons who are not students was strongly advocated. "There is no reason for 18 and 19-year-olds who are not students to be on school grounds," was the consensus. The fact that two boys had been taken to jail as a result of trouble occurring on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week has resulted in several parents present refusing their teen-ager sons use of the family car, it was pointed out. "The cure lies farther back," one parent pointed out. "We are going to work on this at the family level at home because the teen-age girls are not blameless either." It was agreed that law enforcement officers must have the cooperation of parents in the community and some authority must be restored to the school system. It was pointed out that criticism is not being directed at the entire student body, but at the minority which appears to be seeking adverse publicity at the expense of the more serious element.

Shell Wins County Bid

The Shell Oil Company has been awarded the bid for furnishing the Klamath County gasoline during the year beginning March 1, 1958, and the Texas Company submitted the low bid for furnishing diesel fuel. Shell's low bid was 20.87 cents per gallon, and the low diesel bid was 12.48 cents per gallon. The figures are compared with 23.02 cents for gas and 15.2 cents for diesel paid during the now ending year. County Engineer Bill Canton advised the court that the new gas and diesel costs for the upcoming year will result in an annual saving of $8,365 based on last year's fuel consumption quantities. Other gasoline and diesel bids submitted Wednesday, with the gasoline price being listed first in each instance, are as follows: Standard Oil, 21.19 and 13.07; Tidewater Oil, 21.51 and 13.31; Union Oil, 22.53 and 14.03; Richfield Oil, 22.70 and 14.80; and J-Hawk Petroleum, 24.95 and 15.30. The Western Oil and Burner Company submitted the low bid of 14.75 cents per gallon for fuel oil and 15.7 cents for diesel heating oil for use at the county road shops and the nursing home. In other bidding, Mrs. J. M. Britton was granted the yearly bid for feeding prisoners. The lone bid called for 50 cents per meal at the rate of two meals per day. All bids were awarded for the year beginning March 1, 1958. Bids were opened and awarded during Wednesday's court meeting.
