

Study Shows Big Drop In Prison Inmate Ages

By PAUL W. HARVEY, Jr.

SALEM — The average age of Oregon Penitentiary inmates has fallen in the past two years from 32 to 23.3. Warden C. T. Gladden thinks it's an index of the increase in juvenile crime.

Gladden has just completed a study of the 1,400 prisoners. It shows that the number of prisoners under 21 years old has increased from 74 to 110 over the two-year period, with the total prison population remaining about the same.

He divides the ages into five-year groups. The biggest single group is the 21-25 bracket, with 306 inmates, compared with 250 two years ago.

At the other end of the scale, there are 43 prisoners over 61 years old. Thirteen of them are over 70.

The survey has some interesting data on intelligence.

There are 640 prisoners in the 90-109 intelligence quotient range, which is considered normal. There are 573 with below normal intelligence, including 57 in the very low range below 70.

The prison population has 31, though, in the sub-genius class of 120-129, and five over 130.

But they weren't smart enough to stay out of prison.

The prison gives every inmate tests to determine his educational grade level. This doesn't have too much relationship to the grade he finished in school.

Only 85 prisoners rate 12th grade or better. There are 103 illiterates.

The figure of 705 who rated 8th grade or below is about half the prison population, and this supports the warden's belief that lack of education is a major cause of men going to prison.

Where do the men come from? Multnomah County, being the biggest, contributed 289 of the prisoners. It is followed by Lane with 133, Klamath 118, Jackson 85, Marion 82, Douglas 78, Linn 52, Umatilla 48, and Coos 45.

Don't jump to conclusions, however, that those show where the most crimes are committed. One county might have a judge who sends nearly all convicted felons to prison. Another might make liberal use of the probation procedures. Half of all convicted criminals get probation in Oregon. They don't go to prison at all.

Of the total prison population, 499 men are serving their first sentence. There are 335 who have served once before, 132 twice, and 132 three times.

Among the veteran prison inmates, there are two men who have served more than 10 previous prison sentences, and 123 who have served more than four previous terms.

There are 615 men who never served a jail term, but there also are 19 who have been in jails more than 10 times.

The prison population includes 85 life terms. That's a decline of 36 from two years ago.

The most popular crime for which men are sent to the prison is issuing bad checks. There were 349 inmates convicted of that charge.

Burglary is next with 218 inmates, followed by robbery with 165, and larceny with 159. There are 208 sex criminals of all types, 88 murderers, 29 who were convicted of manslaughter, 8 kidnapers and 7 arsonists.

The picture painted by the statistical report is that the average prisoner is younger, that most of them have normal intelligence, and that many of them haven't been in prison before.

Gladden and his staff are attacking parts of the problem by psychiatric studies, schooling and counseling.

Summer Camp Meeting Planned

The prospective faculty for the Southern Oregon Christian Service Camp will meet in Central Point, Tuesday, February 25, to complete plans for the 1958 summer camps. Anyone having a subject to discuss during the meeting may contact Otis Bell, pastor, or Arlene Skaugset at the First Christian Church who will attend the session on behalf of the youth group.

The 1958 Oregon State Christian Endeavor Convention is to be held April 24-27 inclusive in Eugene. Many from the local First Christian Church plan to attend.

Driver Cited After Car Smash

James E. Williams, of 4129 Summers Lane, was cited for failure to yield the right of way Wednesday morning after the vehicle he was operating collided with one driven by Peter Romington, 1143 Alameda Street, at the intersection of Eleventh Street and Klamath Avenue.

Williams was reported making a left turn at the time of the accident. City police said the occupants were not seriously injured and that only slight damage resulted to the vehicle.
