Award Slated By Foresters

McCLOUD — The Redding Forest Forum, a chapter of the Northern California section of the Society of American Foresters, has announced that a scholarship award of $100 is to be awarded a high school senior or junior college student.

The scholarship committee will make their selections in the spring and will make the award when the student has actually enrolled in a four year accredited school of forestry. In exceptional cases, students will be considered who intend to major in some field which is closely allied to forestry. The award is open to both men and women.

Some points that will be considered in making a selection of the recipient are scholastic record, good character and leadership, desire for a forestry education, fitness to enter forestry, experience and financial need. . . Students from Shasta Junior College and Shasta and Siskiyou County high schools are eligible, as are those in Adin, Weaverville and Hayfork.

Applications may be presented to principals or counselors and must be completed by March 31.

Oldster Marks 103 Birthday

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho — Old time Indian fighter George Motz, celebrating his 103rd birthday anniversary, gave this explanation for his long life.

"I was never foolhardy enough to get into any of those silly gun-fights in 1870s." He left his home in Missouri at 10 because he said his father sent him to find the family's team of oxen with orders not to return without them. "I never did find them so I jumped a Missouri River steamboat and headed for Nebraska," Motz recalls. He didn't go home for 25 years.

Politicos Fight In Kansas Over State Finances Issue

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — President Eisenhower's boyhood home state of Kansas is reeling under a furious election-year struggle over state finances between Republicans and the state's first Democratic governor in 20 years.

The GOP-controlled Legislature adjourned last week in a deadlock with Gov. George Docking, a banker, over how to provide 10 million dollars in additional revenue to balance a record state budget for the year starting next July 1.

Most of the bills to spend money sailed through the Legislature with hardly a dissenting vote. Measures to provide new revenue, however, were not enacted.

Docking promptly announced he would call the legislators back in special session to solve the tax muddle, a development GOP leaders anticipated.

But the Governor, ill with fatigue and a bronchial condition, hurled a bed-side bombshell a few days after the lawmakers went home.

He threatened to make the state operate on existing revenues until the next regular legislative session in 1959 by pro-rating available funds among many agencies and institutions.

If the threat was carried out, it would mean a temporary drastic curtailment in state expenditures, state payrolls might have to be slashed, building projects deferred, some state services eliminated.

Kansas is a cash-basis state. It cannot borrow money to pay operating expenses. Docking, elected in 1956 during a bitter internal fight among Republicans, wanted to make up the revenue deficiency by taxing corporations and inheritances for an extra six million dollars and providing additional millions by changing certain state bookkeeping practices.

Republicans, who control the State Senate 30-9 and the House of Representatives 83-42, rejected the plan. They assailed it as inadequate and said it would only delay until after this year's elections the day when more money would have to be raised by new or higher taxes.

The GOP called it a political platform on which Docking would try to become the first Democrat ever reelected governor in Kansas. Republicans passed a bill to raise the state retail sales tax from 2 to 2 1/2 per cent which they contended would meet the need for permanent new revenue.

Court To Set Nunn's Death

MEDFORD — A new execution date will be set Monday for Billy Junior Nunn, 28, Klamath Falls killer.

Nunn, convicted slayer of Alvin Eacret, 14, also Klamath Falls, in April, 1956, won a respite by appealing to the state Supreme Court. His appeal was turned down, and Nunn will be brought from the prison at Salem Monday for the setting of a new execution date.

Thus far in Gov. Robert D. Holmes' administration there have been no executions. He is opposed to capital punishment and recently commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of George Sack, Portland wife slayer.

Capitol Facelifting Project Approved Despite Protests

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Capitol is going to have one of its faces lifted. Ignoring protests by architects and other groups against trifling with the historic edifice, congressional leaders voted Friday to order work started on extending the east front of the Capitol.

Licenses Suspended

The following Klamath County drivers had their licenses suspended for failure to show proof of financial responsibility, the state Department of Motor Vehicles said today.

- Herbert Bertsch, 2344 Eberlein Street, license suspended February 13.
- Donald B. Bush, Box 13, Klamath, California, license suspended February 11.
- Harold L. Doris, 5629 Independence Street, license suspended February 14.
- Willis Edward Ervin, 53, 3216 Cortez Street, license suspended February 11.
- Gerald Maurice Etherton, 21, Box 355 Merrill, license suspended February 10.
- Victor Edward Fritz, 37, 2015 Oregon Avenue, license suspended February 14.
- Alfred Duane Isaacs, Box 274, Chilouin, license suspended February 14.
- Mrs. Alfred D. Isaacs, Box 274, Chilouin, license suspended February 14.
- John Gordon Patterson, 86, 2405 Summers Lane, license suspended February 13.
- Wilbur Alvin Walker, 24, Box 15, Dairy, license suspended February 11.
- Clayton Melvin Chocktoot, 19, 1243 Kane Street, license suspended February 14.

Capitol architect J. George Stewart said the big construction job would start in several months and that he hoped to have it completed in time for the next presidential inauguration in January, 1961.

Under plans approved in a split vote of a special congressional commission the Capitol front will be moved out 32 1/2 feet at an estimated cost of $10,100,000. It is the first phase of a large remodeling program.

The whole project, including extensive construction underground and alterations on the Capitol's west front, is estimated at 110 million dollars. House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R-Mass.), one of five members of the special commission empowered to act on the project, said he opposed it, but was out-voted. Martin declined to say how others voted.

Malin Chamber Slates Crab Feed

MALIN—Ed McCulley, president of the Malin Chamber of Commerce, reminded everyone of the annual crab feed scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, February 24, at the Broadway Hall. McCulley also promised that there would be plenty of crab for everyone and very good entertainment. Payment of the annual dues of $5 will admit one couple. McCulley also pointed out that the new officers and board of directors for the coming year will be announced at the crab feed.

New York's Empire State Building, tallest in the world, is 1,472 feet tall. It has 102 stories.

The extension plans have roused a storm of protest, not only from prominent architects but also from some other groups interested in preservation of the Capitol's historic appearance. Stewart, a principal sponsor of the extension, has said the appearance will be preserved and improved, with better balance provided for the big dome which now appears to overhang the portico. Stewart contends heavy construction work must be done soon whether or not the walls are moved. He says the old sandstone of which the central portion of the capitol is built has begun to crumble from long exposure to the weather. The extension originally was designed the Capitol's center section into line with the fronts of the House and Senate wings. However, the commission said in announcing its decision, that the work approved Friday would still leave "the front line of the central steps, as extended, 40 feet behind the front line of the steps of the House and Senate wings." The commission is headed by Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.). Other members besides Martin and Stewart are Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland.

One Reason Why The Newspaper Gives More For The Advertising Dollar

PEOPLE LIKE ADVERTISING IN NEWSPAPERS BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MEDIUM

People feel friendly toward advertising in newspapers. Surveys show that far fewer people want advertising in other media. An advertiser wants his customers to like him, so it stands to reason he will benefit if he runs his ads where they please instead of annoy people.

The Herald & News Is The Basic Advertising Medium Of The Klamath Basin

Prudent advertisers invest the major part of their advertising budgets in the Herald and News.
