Manufacturers, Garment Workers Reach Agreement

NEW YORK (AP)—Negotiators for dress manufacturers and 105,000 striking garment workers reached agreement today on a new three-year contract.

Subject to ratification by both sides, the pact restores peace to the industry — New York City's largest — after the first major walkout in 25 years. The strike started last Wednesday.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, said no one would return to work before tomorrow morning. Picketing will continue, he said, until the union receives word of employer ratification, expected tonight.

Union shop stewards vote today on the pact. Return of the workers in a seven-state area will permit a start on the movement of dresses for the windup of the pre-Easter delivery. These dresses will bear a union label, said Dubinsky. They will cost more because of higher wages, according to the manufacturers.

The increased labor cost was estimated at 75 million dollars over the contract term. Hammered out during seven continuous hours of negotiations overnight was the problem of contract enforcement — the last obstacle to agreement after money issues were settled by negotiators Sunday.

Harry Uviller, impartial chairman of the dress industry and one of two special negotiators named by Mayor Robert F. Wagner, said the enforcement provisions are "so complicated that until we get it down in the report we won't be able to go into that."

Both sides said they hoped the enforcement program could be carried out in nonunion shops and those outside the five associations involved in the strike.

The wage agreement includes an 11 1/4 per cent package increase, including 8 per cent for higher wages and overtime for piece workers after 35 hours a week.

Prestrike wages averaged $2.10 an hour in New York City, where 60,000 of the strikers worked, and were 50 to 75 cents an hour less elsewhere. About 80 per cent of the workers are paid on a piece work basis. Most of the workers are women.

The agreement does not affect strikes in some 200 plants represented by the Pennsylvania Garment Manufacturers Assn. The group, which includes firms both in Pennsylvania and upstate New York, has not negotiated with the ILGWU since its old contract expired Jan. 31.

Dubinsky said the strike in Pennsylvania and some sections of New York will continue.

On strike outside New York City were 45,000 employees in New Jersey, Delaware, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and upstate New York. A union spokesman said the walkout had negligible effect on a few scattered shops in Maryland and Vermont.

Pierre Renoir, the French Impressionist who died in 1919, produced more than 6,000 paintings.

Comic 'Leads' Concert Show NEW YORK (AP)—Maestro Danny Kaye "conducted" at Carnegie Hall last night. The old masters whose works he murdered must have turned over in their graves. Although art suffered, the New York Philharmonic's pension fund benefited from the prices charged for the concert. And everybody had a good time. Danny loved onstage carrying a dozen batons. He shook hands not only with the concert master, but also with a dozen other men in the 100-member orchestra. After winding his way through the ensemble, he reached the two female harpists and gave each a kiss. Then—as if overcome with emotion—he planted a kiss on the brow of a male bullfiddle player. Finally reaching the podium, he handed out batons to orchestra members like noise markers at a New Year's Eve party. He fell off the podium, and the baton flew into the audience. Danny gave his cues to the musicians by kicking out his foot, sticking out his tongue, shouting "Gaboorn," barking like a seal when he was pleased, and giggling at every pleasant sound.
