The foreign ministers of the eight nations outlined the results of their meeting in a 1,200-word communique which pinpointed "the insidious character" of Communist subversion as Southeast Asia's "most substantial current menace."

Without naming them, the council warned "some non-Communist governments" against "failing to distinguish between the aims and big new program of economic aid to meet Pakistani charges that such neutral nations as India were getting more help than free world allies.

Instead the Council of Ministers pointed out that SEATO's three Asian members — Pakistan, Thailand and the Philippines — had gotten more than 700 million dollars in economic aid in the past year, principally from the United States.

The communique said the programs of extensive bilateral and other economic arrangements between the SEATO countries would continue. In addition, it cited U.S.

Secretary of State Dulles' announcement that the United States would put up two million dollars for a program of vocational and on-the-job training for Asian members, and the Australian grant of one million pounds ($2,230,000) to the Asian members. The communique also called attention to Dulles' statement that the major portion of U.S. economic aid now is going to Asia.

Dulles himself made a personal effort to soothe Pakistan. After the final conference session, he drove off with Commerce Minister N.M.A. Qizilbash, the Pakistani delegate, for a private talk.
