Gun-Wielding Girl Shot To Death By Rookie Officer

TOPPENISH, Wash. (AP) — A rookie patrolman shot a 16-year-old girl to death at a crowded bus station yesterday as she aimed a pistol at him.

Sandra Lingscheit, only child of Columbia Basin irrigation project farm couple from Eltopia, Wash., was killed by two .38-caliber slugs which tore into her left chest.

Patrolman Richard Stevens, 33, told Police Chief Earl Phillips he had no recourse but to shoot the girl, whose gun posed a threat to the some 50 persons crowded into the small bus depot in this south central Washington city.

Phillips said Stevens was "carrying out my orders and acting in defense of his own life."

Stevens had been sent to the bus depot to intercept Sandra and Janice at the request of Franklin County officials.

Three times Stevens ordered her to drop the weapon. When his last order went unheeded he drew his own gun and shot her.

Janice, untouched, told Prosecutor Ray Munson she and Sandra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Lingscheit, were on their way to Portland, Janice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Teel of Reno, Nev., has been living with an aunt, Mrs. Ruth Sanduski, at Pasco, Wash.

Ape Boards Cargo Ship

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Navy and Nicky, a friendly Barbary ape, have each other up a tree.

Nicky, destined for a Memphis zoo, escaped from his cage yesterday and fled up the rigging of the cargo ship Antares.

He was kept awake during the night hours by the glare of spotlights thrown on the 50-foot mast.

How to get him down? The Navy wished it knew.

"I think he'll come down all right," said Cmdr. J. F. Miller, skipper of the Antares, which is tied up at a Norfolk Naval Base pier. "Maybe we can lure him down with bananas—he seems to like them. We'll just improvise as we go."

When it became obvious that Nicky wasn't going to be persuaded to come down, Miller set a "monkey watch."

The "monkey watch" hoisted a small heater into the rigging to keep Nicky warm. It focused the spotlight on him to be sure he wouldn't crawl out a cargo boom unnoticed.

Once a sailor succeeded in getting the three-foot-tall, 5-year-old Nicky to descend and accept a banana. But before a net could be lowered over him, Nicky sped back up the mast—with the banana.

Nicky is a gift from the British admiral commanding at Gibraltar to the Memphis zoo. He was being transferred from his seagoing cage to the smaller cage in which he will be shipped to Memphis when he got away.

Empty Bus Takes Plunge

REEDSPORT, Ore. (AP) — A school bus, which only a short time before had been loaded with some 50 grade school pupils, plunged over a high bank into a field near here yesterday.

The bus driver, Harold Andrews, 55—the only occupant—was dead inside. He apparently suffered a fatal heart seizure, said Deputy Coroner Jack Ungar.

First reports, relayed here by radio, that the bus had plunged into nearby Smith River sent a wave of panic through this Southern Oregon coastal town. It was thought that the children might still have been aboard.

The children had been let off earlier, however, and Andrews was en route to pick up another load when he was stricken.

Article Features Collier Park

Collier Park Logging Museum. Illustrated with numerous pictures, is featured in the December 1957 issue of "Steam Engines," a magazine dedicated to men who work with steam. Ray Campbell is the publisher.

The park, located on Highway 97, 35 miles north of Klamath Falls, was visited by Mr. and Mrs. Campbell last summer when pictures of the museum logging equipment were taken. The accompanying text deals with the steam engines used in the logging industry over many years of progress.

First use of steam in the logging woods was 1884. Steam power saws date back to the early 1900s.
