COUNCIL-MANAGER AMENDMENT

It Will Provide Better City Government Because —

A trained administration is more efficient.

Central purchasing gets more for the dollar.

City employees, trained and holding jobs on merit give better service.

A hired manager would carry out policies of the voters.

The manager would relieve the excessive burden of details placed on volunteer citizen committees.

The manager would relieve the council of endless hours making minor decisions.

Pooled and controlled distribution of equipment would save money.

Continuous planning from one administration to the next would assure sensible development.

It would enable council to spend time on the important matters.

A manager would know how to deal with state and federal agencies in connection with city affairs.

A manager would save time of department heads by giving them decisions on the spot rather than waiting for council or committees to meet.

A manager would give taxpayers more service for the money.

Further --- We would have more and better candidates running for council and mayor. Under present conditions the excessive and time consuming work load on details is too much for most people to tackle. It would therefore provide a more democratic city government.
