MOSCOW (AP) — Tass said Wednesday that reports blaming communists for the stoning of Vice President Nixon in Caracas, Venezuela, are "provocative fabrications spread by foreign agents." The Soviet News Agency said the Venezuelan government and press have denied Communist responsibility for the demonstrations Tuesday. Tass carried a detailed report of the incidents and lengthy excerpts from U.S. newspapers criticizing Washington's Latin American policies.

HIGH SCHOOL board chairman Jack Linman reads the letters which were directed to the KUHS Budget Board concerning why the budget was defeated during the May 5 balloting. The majority of the letters expressed objections to rising school costs in face of lessening business conditions. Another major target was the number of "non-essential" courses now being taught in the schools. —Photo by Kettler

High School Under Study During Budget Hearings

BY JOHN GUERNSEY

Although a multitude of complaints were voiced by persons writing the KUHS budget board and by those attending the Wednesday evening informal budget discussion, the three dissatisfactions most consistently voiced were these:

1. Taxes are continually on the increase, business is now in a state of recession, and the general public cannot afford increasing costs for public schools.

2. There are unnecessary courses being taught in the schools and some of them should be deleted as a tax saving. A good portion of the letter writers expressed complete accord with the Nelson Reed letter published in last Sunday's issue of the Herald and News. Essentially, it is Reed's conviction that we should return to the days of fundamental course teaching, and abandon many of the progressive education theories and courses which have developed during the past 20 years.

3. Other letters took exception with the administration and with the courses and teaching methods advocated by Superintendent Arnold Gralapp. It was further contended that the school boards in the past have been a rubber stamp for the Gralapp policies.

Complaints of lesser consistency objected to the approved teacher salary increases, the amounts spent for music, physical education and other non academic subjects, with teachers discussing the budgets with their students in classes, and too many supervisors.

One letter put it like this . . . "A student comes out of the schools here and he can draw a doggoned good picture . . . however, he isn't qualified to draw a pay check. It seems like the new type of education is designed to put brains to sleep."

It was pretty generally agreed by those attending the meeting that the bulk of persons voting against the budgets had done so because of the existing economic conditions coupled with a mounting tax load.

Concerning the course criticism, Superintendent Gralapp explained that the [illegible] [illegible] of fundamental courses which were required for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in the country. He added that many of the fine arts courses, the vocational and related courses, and the class groupings are vitally necessary when it is realized that the schools must prepare students of all capabilities; including those who do not plan to go to college and those who do.

Concerning charges that the boards have been nothing but rubber stamps for Gralapp and his policies, Jack Linman, board chairman, told the group that he highly regards the administrative ability of the superintendent, and that at no time during Linman's 10 years on the board did Gralapp attempt to force his will upon the board.

Also lauding the administrative ability of Gralapp was Bob Veatch, former president of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce.

"I have voted against the city school budgets for the past three years," Veatch said. "At the same time, I don't see where anyone is justified in taking pot shots at the school and budget boards or the administration.

"A good portion of the school policies and courses are prescribed and dictated from the state level, and that's where we should make the corrections."

It was Veatch's thinking that the property owner is burdened with a disproportionately high share of financing the schools, and that the state should devise a more equitable means of spreading the school tax load.

"I'm also one of the many who feel that the school elections should be held at the same time as the primary elections," he continued. "However, there again it is the state law which prescribes that the school elections should be held on the first Monday of May."

Veatch also said that much of the resentment involving the schools is prompted by the people not understanding the budgets and the policies and programs of the schools. He suggested that the school boards have monthly forums for the purpose of discussing the schools with the voters.

The majority of the board members expressing themselves were of the opinion that the defeated budget was a sound one, but the board will explore the matter further to determine where any cuts can be made.

The board then went into a budget scrutiny meeting and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a.m. The board will undertake further [illegible] of the budgets [illegible] [illegible] the KUHS library. The amount which may be cut cannot be determined at this time.

FBI Returns Alleged Rapist

Accused 18 - year - old rapist Adolph McFadyen, who escaped from the Oregon State Hospital last August, was returned to Klamath Falls yesterday after his arrest by FBI agents in Colorado.

Sheriff Murray Britton said the neat-dressing youth will be arraigned in circuit court today on the same charge that earned him a 60-day observation period in the mental hospital.

That charge arose out of an attempt by McFadyen in March, 1957, to rape an 18-year girl on Lakeshore Drive, after forcing her car off the road near the skating rink.

The sheriff's office said the 5 ft., 5 in. former KUHS student admitted his guilt after his arrest by police here. A local patrolman spotted paint on McFadyen's car that matched that on the girl's auto.

The teen-ager was returned by Deputy Sheriff Fred Calfee from Montrose County, Colorado. Calfee said the youth told him he had been in the Montrose area since last September, shortly after his escape from Salem.

Living under an assumed name, McFadyen had been working in a uranium mine for [illegible] weeks, Calfee said the accused told him. McFadyen is also suspected of committing a number of other rapes in this area during the months before his apprehension last year.

Reddoe Dismisses Several Cases

An accumulation of criminal cases have been wholesalely dismissed this week by District Attorney Arthur Reddoe.

So far, the DA has decided not to prosecute nine cases and "several more" will also be dismissed in the near future.

Reddoe, in explaining the large number of dismissals, said the cases were "improper" and that "the evidence contained in them would not sustain a conviction."

"There is no use wasting the taxpayers' money in taking cases to court where there is no chance of conviction," the DA declared.

He stated all the cases in question were prepared before he was appointed to office May 1.

They range from drunk driving to assault with a deadly weapon.

Youths Prefer Work To Jail

A pair of Malin High School youths have decided to go to work and earn some money rather than face possible prosecution on vandalism charges.

Sheriff Murray (Red) Britton said today the two boys got a little too much spring fever one recent midnight and wrapped several lengths of aluminum sprinkler pipe around a tree in a Malin Street.

After questioning a number of MHS youths, Sheriff Britton and Malin Police Chief (Shorty) Schmidt determined who the responsibles were.

The officers gave them an alternative of paying $100 or facing disciplinary action. They chose to pay.

Great Northern Files Petition

The Great Northern Railway has filed a petition in circuit court as a first response to the $150,000 damage suit recently brought against the company by Mrs. Clara M. Henninger, of 2212 Eberlein Avenue.

Mrs. Henninger's husband, George, was killed on the job in the GN yards here last December. Her complaint alleges that his death was due to the railway's negligence.

The GN's petition, filed by its attorney, George H. Fraser, of Portland, in effect asks the court to strike the references to "negligence"—and other imputations of blame against the company—from Mrs. Henninger's complaint. The court is asked, if it does not order these words stricken, to require the plaintiff to spell out certain of her allegations in detail.

Impossible For Future KF Managers To Be Dictators

It is impossible for a future Klamath Falls city manager to become a dictator, local radio and TV audiences were told Tuesday night.

This is true because the city council would have power to dismiss the manager at any time for any reason, since he would not be working under a contract, according to Robert Duff, Medford city manager.

Duff was one of four speakers who took part in the half-hour panel show which went on at 10 p.m.

The others, all proponents of the council-manager plan, to be voted on tomorrow, were Darell Miller, ex-Klamath Falls council member and now a Medford budget committeeman; John Houston, ex-mayor here, who spoke in behalf of present Mayor Lawrence Slater; and Murdo Morrison, architect, who was chairman of the Manager-Charter Committee.

Moderator of the program was Wally Richards, KOTI-TV manager.

In outlining the duties and responsibilities of a city manager, Duff said that in general he is charged with carrying out the policies of the council, preparing the budget and supervising work of the various city departments.

Because of these duties performed by the manager, councilmen are freed from some 20 to 60 hours of city work per week and instead would only have to put in about one to five hours of actual work, Darrell Miller pointed out.

This would enable the council to do its prime job, setting policy, instead of helter-skeltering around as they do presently, trying unsuccessfully to administer the endless details of city business, Miller told the audience.

He said a more democratic city government would result from the manager plan because people from all walks of life could run for the council, not just those who happen to have 20 to 40 hours a week to spare.

In comparing the Medford manager government with the non-manager type, Miller declared the former was "far superior" and that there is "no comparison between the two."

Houston stated that the present city council setup here is not providing full control over the expenditure of some $1,200,000 of taxpayers' money each year. This is because councilmen, despite their long hours, just don't have enough time to adequately administer city business, Houston affirmed, whereas a city manager would have time.

Morrison reported his committee spent two years in research to determine feasibility of the manager type of city government. This included surveys of other communities employing a manager. Invariably these other cities found it far and above the non-manager type, Morrison stated.

One Eugene councilman, Morrison continued, told the committee that six of Eugene's eight councilmen would have to resign because of the time factor if that city returned to the non-manager plan.

An official of the National Municipal League told the committee there was only once city charter in the nation as long as that of Klamath Falls: New York City's. The official stated that this city's charter is bogged down with petty details, is outmoded and in many instances unworkable, Morrison told the TV viewers and radio listeners.

Other comments brought out by the panel:

George Washington was one of the first Americans to conceive and support a city manager type of government. Herbert Hoover, Charles Taft and other well known Americans work closely with the National Municipal League, which strongly indorses the city manager plan.

High Court Hopeful Here

Samuel M. Rowe, candidate for the position No. 3 for judge of the Oregon Supreme Court, visited Klamath Falls Wednesday as the final campaign point prior to election day.

Rowe, a graduate of Dallas elementary and high school, and Willamette University Law School was admitted to the Oregon Bar in 1933, practiced in Montana from 1933 to 1938 and since 1938 has practiced law in Grants Pass.

He was the first veteran of World War II to become state commander of the American Legion. He served in the infantry in World War II.

In the legal field, Rowe has served on the Board of Governors of the Oregon State Bar from 1952 to 1955. He is currently serving on the Board of Bar Examiners.

While visiting in Klamath Falls, Rowe pointed out that the case load decided by the Supreme Court has been decreasing seriously in recent years. In 1957, he pointed out that 257 cases were received by the court but only 152 were disposed of, leaving over a hundred undecided.

There is a backload of almost two years work, he declared.

"The output of the court must be increased," he stated. "And this can be done by the use of briefer decisions. After 100 years of judicial history there is certainly plenty of background to render decisions on most cases, he said.

Contending with Rowe for the supreme court judgeship will be Boyd Overhulse and Gordon Sloan.

Teacher's Daughter Better After Fall

Judy Woodruff, 17, daughter of Stanley Woodruff, Klamath Union High School teacher, was admitted to Klamath Valley Hospital this morning after being thrown from her horse on the Homedale Road.

Miss Woodruff, a student at Henley High School, was knocked unconscious by the fall. She regained consciousness on arrival at the hospital, where X-rays showed no bones broken. Her condition is described as "good."

FENCE FIRE

A wooden fence on the property of Mrs. Mary Mitchell at 619 North Eleventh Street, caught fire early this morning. A garage on the property was also damaged before the fire was put out by the city fire department.
