From the left, Kathleen (Kathy) Gallagher, Lottie (Mrs. Thomas H.) Massey, Esther Storts, JoAnn Borden and Wilma (Mrs. Gene) Stivers.

Room decorations were in green and pink, and the background screen for the gift table, designed and made by Wilma Stivers was green and pink with white wedding bells, entwined wedding rings and small clusters of spring blossoms in pastel shades. Not pictured is Janice Long, who registered the shower gifts as they were opened.

Farewell Dinner Honors Teachers

CHILQUIN — Members of the Chilquin grade school faculty gave a planned potluck dinner on May 6 in honor of four teachers who will not return to their Chilquin classes after summer vacation. Leaving are Helen (Mrs. James) Parsley, Mrs. David Schneider, Mrs. John Heilbronner and John Heilbronner.

Mrs. Athel Roser, spouse for the farewell party, presented each honored guest with a book of cartoons selected and assembled by Mrs. Lester Hoback and Mrs. Gail Ridenour. The cartoons in each book were chosen especially for the individual recipient, and the use of local names added humor to the clever captions.

Dinner was served at tables covered with pink cloths and decorated with low, colorful arrangements of geraniums and lighted tall chandelier tapers. Besides the host and honoree faculty members, the dinner was attended by their families and the cafeteria staff.

Mrs. Parsley will move with her husband to Eugene where they have bought a home. The Parsleys have lived in Chilquin since 1925, where Parsley was a logger until his recent retirement. Mrs. Parsley has taught primary grades in the Chilquin School since the fall of 1943, and is presently teaching second grade.

Mrs. Schneider, whose husband has been pastor of the Fort Klamath and Chilquin Methodist churches for the past two years, taught fourth grade during that time. They had lived in Latin America for the 15 years prior to coming to Oregon. They plan to enroll for advanced training at Garrett Biblical Institute at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, and after that, will return to their missionary work in Latin America.

The Heilbronners, after living for three years in Chilquin, have moved to Klamath Falls. He has been teaching a combination seventh and eighth grade class, and Mrs. Heilbronner has been teaching third grade. Next school year they will teach classes in the Klamath County School system that are closer to Klamath Falls.

Women Must Be Better.... Not "Just As Good" To Compete In Male World

CLAREMONT, Calif. (NEA)—A woman has to be a better worker than a man to hold a professional or industrial job today, Dr. Graham Bell, professor of psychology at Pomona College here, believes. Women have more problems than men in the business and professional field, he said. They not only have to excel in the job, but also have to do better in the field of human relations. Vocational adjustment is different for women than for men, he maintained. One difficulty a woman faces is the problem of social customs which presume a certain way of behavior toward women. "But there is no reason why a woman should not keep flowers on her desk," Bell said. "She doesn't have to act like a man to hold a position in today's business world."

"She must understand, of course, the conventions of society and must provide for them in her behavior." Another problem for women workers is that men resent taking orders from women, he said. Therefore, the woman executive must learn how to give indirect orders and how to avoid giving any direct orders.

"She must also get away from the feminine trait, into which she has been trained from childhood, of trying to make everything run smoothly and please everyone. There is no need to emphasize getting along with everyone all the time." Professional women must temper justice with kindness but should not substitute kindness for justice, he said. He notes an increasing number of women participating in the working world because entry is easier and opportunities are greater, just as they are for men. Dr. Bell, chairman of the college's psychology department, urges professional women to recognize their responsibilities to set up programs to help younger women and high school and college students to know what careers and jobs they can hope to attain. Students particularly need guidance along this line, he said. Women must also assume the responsibility for their own continuing professional development, he said.

KLAMATH FALLS

Two April birthday anniversaries were celebrated in the Harold Walsh family. The first, by Kathy Walsh, 7, who gave a luncheon. Easter favors, balloons and musical chairs provided party fun before Kathy and her guests went to a movie later in the afternoon.

The other was celebrated by Tommy, 10, who invited a group of friends to dinner. Before dinner was served the boys were occupied with creating amusing and colorful gum-drop and pipe-cleaner animals.

White shorty gloves, printed in red, yellow or blue roses, are sure-fire accessories for wear with a navy coat or suit this spring. Pretty with gray, too.

BEAUTY SALONS GIVE A LIFT TO THE LITTLE WOMAN'S EGO FOR LOTS LESS THAN "THE COUCH"

"Really, Ethel, I feel like a new woman. And remember, don't breathe a word of what I've told you to a soul."

With this admonition, Mrs. America touches her newest hairdo—"Just meant for you, honey!"—steals a glance in a mirror already crowded with chrome-capped faces and marches out of the beauty parlor.

The little woman may not emerge looking like Marilyn Monroe, but if she feels important and satisfied with herself, then the mission has been accomplished.

Ask any man why women go regularly to beauty parlors and then prepare to hold your ears, especially if it is his billfold that is being clipped.

But two women, a psychologist and sociologist, analyzed the situation. And, according to them, it is a happy day when the wife goes for a retouch job, no matter the bill. They pulled their mutual couches up next to the hair dryer, eavesdropping for proof of this point.

Filtering scientific data from other parlor news of the day, the researchers found this trip for beauty not only boosts the female ego, but it also relieves the id. So much so, they say that the little woman is either well adjusted now, or she soon will be if she continues to visit the beauty salon. So, men, if your wife says she's going to get a haircut, shampoo, wave or manicure, she really is. But don't let her fool you. She also is getting pampered and prettied to face the work-a-day world.

As a bonus she gets self-confidence and a feeling of importance. She relaxes and lets her hair down. A new hairdo, change in cosmetics and facial, answer her need for a change. And as a topper she gets mild physical therapy. All this, according to psychologists, cuts down on analyst's bills.

Take, for example, when one of the girls lets her hair down. No one sweeps it into a wastebasket. Someone listens sympathetically.

According to barber shop lore, the barber talks incessantly. The poor male with a hot towel over his face is a captive audience. But not in a beauty parlor. A Helene Curtis survey reveals that 90 per cent of the ladies talk to their beauticians and mostly about personal problems.

American husbands may groan when they learn that 500 million dollars is spent on hair care alone each year in this country.

But consider the European budget for beauty. There are more beauty parlors, per capita, in Europe than in the U.S., where 3,500,000 women go regularly to 375,000 beauty shops.
