

Holmes, Hatfield Score Big Wins Over Opponents

By PAUL W. HARVEY, Jr., Associated Press Staff Writer

A general election governorship between two handsome men, viewed as representatives of the liberal elements in their parties, shaped up Saturday after Oregon's primary election.

Democratic Gov. Robert D. Holmes, 49-year-old Astoria former radio station manager who was elected in 1956 to upset 18 years of Republican rule, and 35-year-old Republican Secretary of State Mark Hatfield, won their party nominations by large margins in balloting marked by a light voter turnout and few hot campaign issues.

The election also saw Rep. Walter Norblad win an easy 2 to 1 victory for Republican nomination in the 1st Congressional District. His opponent will be Democratic Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton, who coasted to a 3 to 1 win.

Supreme Court Justices George Rossman and Gordon Sloan were virtually reelected, needing only the formality of unopposed voting in November.

The renomination of Holmes was a replay of his first primary two years ago. While he then had trouble nosing out former state Sen. Lew Wallace, Portland, this time he beat Wallace better than 2 to 1.

In the six-man Republican race for governor, Hatfield, who entered politics only eight years ago while dean of students at Willamette University, won with surprising ease over State Treasurer Sig Unander.

Returns from 2,400 of the state's 2,674 precincts gave:

Democratic—Holmes 120,645, Wallace, 55,093, and Multnomah County Assessor Wiley W. Smith 17,289.

Republican—Hatfield 98,965, Unander 60,352, State Sen. Warren Gill 37,988. The other three candidates—Albert Eichman, George Livingston and Orval Rasor—trailed far behind.

The size of Norblad's margin also was surprising, although he campaigned harder than at any time since he went to Congress 13 years ago.

In 71 of 740 precincts, Norblad beat former State Sen. Phil Hitchcock, 46,260 to 22,581.

In winning the Democratic nomination, Thornton defeated Don Metheny, Brooks onion grower, 38,020 to 12,414.

Thornton, a controversial figure, because of his role as special prosecutor in the Portland vice investigation, is in the middle of his second term.

Norblad is the only Republican in Oregon's six-member delegation to Congress. The other three Democratic House members—E. D. H. Green, Portland; Al Ullman, Baker; and Charles O. Porter, Eugene—won renomination unopposed.

In the only other congressional contest, John Johnson, Portland salesman and naval reservist, won the Republican nomination in the 3rd District. He will oppose Mrs. Green in the fall.

Justices Rossman and Sloan will have their names on the November ballot without opposition, so their victories amounted to reelection.

Rossman beat Jason Lee, Salem lawyer who had argued that Rossman at 73 is too old. Rossman, with 30 years of service on the court, is its dean.

By getting more votes than the combined total of his two opponents, Sloan avoided having to run off in the general election against the second highest man.

Returns from 2,478 precincts gave Rossman a 205,188 to 163,365 lead over Lee. Sloan had 195,980, compared with 114,380 for Senate President Boyd Overhulse, and 51,047 for Samuel Bove, Grants Pass lawyer.

Sloan, an Astoria lawyer, was appointed to the court last March by Gov. Holmes.

Slightly fewer than half of the registered voters cast their ballots in the primary.

With a registration of 629,000, almost 400,000 appeared to have voted. This is exactly what state election officials had predicted.

Circuit Judge Race Close

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

All circuit judges up for reelection were successful in Oregon's primary election. But some of the contests were close.

Circuit Judge Edward C. Kelly, Medford, appointed last year by Gov. Robert D. Holmes, scored a narrow victory over Walter D. Nunley, Medford lawyer and former district attorney.

Another appointee of Holmes, Circuit Judge Richard Anderson of Newport, won renomination. He faces a runoff against Stewart Weiss, Lebanon lawyer. Running a poor third was former Gov. John Hall, Newport.

In the district which includes Lincoln, Benton and Linn counties, Anderson had 10,673, Weiss 8,078, and Hall 4,272.

Another new circuit judge, Lyle R. Wolf of Baker, defeated Austin Dunn, Baker lawyer and former state senator.

State Sen. Dan Dimick (D-Roseburg) failed in his bid for circuit judge, losing to Robert G. Davis, Roseburg lawyer.

District Judge James M. Main, Medford, won in a three-man contest for circuit judge in Jackson and Josephine counties.

Langley Fails DA Attempt

PORTLAND (AP)—William Langley, the ousted district attorney, was rebuffed by Multnomah County's Democratic voters Friday as he sought to get back into office.

Langley ran for—but failed to get—the Democratic nomination for district attorney, the same office from which he was removed by court order after conviction on a charge of failing to prosecute gambling.

Two more charges are hanging over Langley as part of the Portland vice story which has been in the courts for two years. One says he tried to open up the town to gambling and the other accuses him of conspiring to receive a bribe.

In Friday's primary, the nomination went to Charles Raymond, a long-time aide under two other district attorneys here, 3 to 2.

Republicans appeared to have nominated Don Walker to oppose him in the fall in this Democratic county, but Larry Landgraver was within striking distance in the mounting vote tally.

High Court Winners Told

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Justice George Rossman found age no barrier as he won another six year term on Oregon's Supreme Court in Friday's primary election.

And Justice Gordon Sloan was way in front of his three-man race, with a clear majority over Boyd Overhulse and Samuel Bove.

Rossman, 74, was called too old for the job by his 42-year-old opponent, Jason Lee. Voters, though, gave Rossman a 7 to 5 margin as they followed the endorsement of the Oregon Bar.

Overhulse, president of the Oregon Senate, ran far behind Sloan, a recent appointee of Gov. Robert D. Holmes, but ran 2 to 1 ahead of Bove, Grants Pass attorney.

The question whether the two combined would get as many votes as Sloan was decided early Saturday—they did not. That put Sloan's name alone on the November ballot the same as Rossman's for his position.

The veteran Rossman has been on Oregon's high court since 1927. His younger opponent, Lee, first entered the political field when he tried for Congress two years ago. He got the Democratic nomination for the 1st District but failed before Rep. Walter Norblad in the fall.

Portlanders Veto Manager

PORTLAND (AP)—Voters in Portland said "no" Friday to a proposal that they switch to a city manager type of government. The margin held close to 3,000 in Saturday's vote tabulation.

The voters also decided to stay out of the mass transit business. They did that decisively, rejecting the proposal by a 2 to 1 margin.

The city manager plan was being pushed almost from the outset of the counting and when the totals at midnight neared 110,000, it was 32,000 for the plan and 57,000 against it.

An effort to force the city to build its $4-million-dollar Exposition-Recreation Center at Delta Park, near the Columbia River, instead of near the downtown district, was rejected more than 7 to 3.

Win Cheered By Hatfield

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Secretary of State Mark Hatfield, winner of the Republican nomination for governor, issued this victory statement early Saturday:

"The unofficial returns indicate a victory that is the result of diligent efforts of many people in all sections of this great state. They initiated my candidacy through signatures on filing petitions and they, and their fellow citizens, followed up with the indelible endorsement of the voting booth pencil.

"While it would be tempting to join in jubilant celebration, I am fully mindful of the responsibility that is now mine. I am confident that those whose support I have just received will be joined in the days ahead by additional numbers who want a program that will inspire confidence... that will unite people who have been divided by major political parties, may go forward together as we enter our Centennial Year and our second century of statehood.

"My two principal opponents have demonstrated ability in their government service and it is my hope they may continue in public life for many years to come.

"My thanks and lasting appreciation to everyone who made possible the victory which I now accept on their behalf."

Man Hit By Car On Road

A 28-year-old Sprague River man suffered a broken leg about 2 a.m. Saturday when he was struck by a vehicle eight miles north of Klamath Falls on U.S. Highway 97. The victim was Eugene Montgomery.

Investigating state police said that Montgomery and two companions were standing in the road near their parked vehicle. The car driven by Mario L. Ferrante, Oregon City, reportedly swerved to miss two of the persons in the southbound lane of traffic and struck Montgomery a glancing blow. He was rushed to the hospital by Peace Ambulance. No citations were issued.

In other action the state police investigated the reports that the headlights of the R. H. Lane vehicle, 1088 Kane Street, were painted red sometime during the evening.

Zoo Keepers Get Clean Bill After Child Killed By Lion

WASHINGTON (AP)—Officials Saturday absolved zoo keepers of any blame in the lion slaying of 2½-year-old Julia Ann Vogt.

U.S. Atty. Oliver Gasch said after an investigation of the incident there was no evidence of any criminal negligence.

Dr. Theodore H. Green, zoo director, said the keepers had been questioned about their conduct Friday and that he was satisfied they acted "in the best possible way."

Meanwhile, officials still were unable to tell which of two lions dragged tiny Julia Ann into a cage and decapitated her.

The lion house was reopened to the public, although strong patrols of keepers were posted in the area.

Julia Ann, visiting from Canada, roamed too close to a lion's cage and was pulled through the bars. Her grandfather, 67-year-old Harry Jackson, collapsed with a mild heart attack after a vain attempt to save her.

One keeper was inside the lion house when Julia Ann was slain, but no attendants were outside near the cage itself. However, there is a 3½-foot guardrail designed to keep spectators a safe distance away.

Zoo officials indicated their efforts to find out exactly what happened have been hampered by conflicting eyewitness reports. Green said he hoped "we'll eventually find out."

However, J. Lear Grimmer, associate zoo director, said there have been so many conflicting reports it is doubtful officials will be able to determine which lion killed the little girl.

Little Julia Ann, visiting here with her small sister and mother from Chilliwack, B.C., went to the zoo with Jackson, her grandfather.

Saturday, from his bed, Jackson gave this account of what happened.

"I just walked down to the zoo with my two children. I had each of their hands and we walked around the cages.

"The older one and I looked over to the left where there were some lions pacing around.

"The first thing I knew the little one on my other side had ducked through the railing and ran up to the cage. When I asked her to hold my hand, she had a habit of saying, 'I hold my own hand, Granddaddy' and that was the last thing she said.

"I reached over the railing to try to grab her but by that time the lion had pulled her into the cage.

"I tried pulling on her arm and head and I called for help, but it was too late to do anything for her. A lady stepped up to help me.

"Julia Ann didn't make a sound."

Norblad Gets Easy Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rep. Walter Norblad, faced with what appeared to be the fight of his political life, doubled the vote of Phil Hitchcock so fast in Friday night's counting that his victory was conceded by 10:30 p.m.

This stunning triumph of Oregon's only Republican member of Congress put him into the fall contest in the 1st District against Robert Y. Thornton, state's attorney general, who had no trouble at all in trimming Don Metheny, union farmer, more than 3 to 1.

The easy Thornton victory on the Democratic side was expected. Norblad's was not.

Hitchcock was a strong contender two years ago for the senatorial nomination, losing to Doug McKay in a strongly publicized contest. It was supposed he would give Norblad a tussle.
