Property Tax Protested

Weyerhaeuser Timber Company has protested the assessed valuation placed on some of its Klamath County property for tax purposes.

In a letter to the Klamath County Equalization Board, it objects to the way assessed values were determined for its "movable machinery and equipment and inventories."

The market value of these movable properties was set at 100 per cent of their actual worth.

The company maintains market value should be set at only 90 per cent of true worth—the rate which is applied to all stationary property in the county.

If the 90 per cent were used on all its Klamath County properties, Weyerhaeuser would pay about $9,000 less in taxes next fiscal year.

A suit is now pending in the State Supreme Court, filed by the Crown-Zellerbach concern against the State Tax Commission, which seeks the uniform 90 per cent rate.

The Klamath County Equalization Board has written the commission, asking the status of the suit and the commission's present policy on determining market values.

The board, which has the authority to uphold either the assessor or the protestor, has followed the commission's past policy of the 100 per cent rate on movable property and 90 per cent on stationary.

In all, the board has received 18 protests to assessed valuations, including one from the Medford Neon Company, objecting to the 100 per cent rate on signs which it considers movable in this county.

Fire Protection Petition Okayed

The Klamath County Court yesterday approved a petition to form a rural fire protection district in the townsite of Crescent at the north end of the county.

The petition was signed by more than 25 per cent of the owners, or contract holders, as required by state law, a check by County Assessor Clyde Caldwell showed.

Next step will be for the county court to set a date for an election among those within the district boundaries to determine if a majority wants it. At the same time a board of directors would be elected, if the district carried.

What the cost would be to landholders and other details such as quantity of fire fighting equipment have not yet been dislcosed.

ADOLPH R. McFADYEN, 18, confessed attempted rapist, appeared calm and untroubled Tuesday morning after his appearance before Circuit Court Judge David R. Vandenberg. McFadyen received a sentence not to exceed five years in the state penitentiary. The youth escaped last August from the State Mental Hospital at Salem, where he was committed from here, after admitting he forced the auto of an 18-year-old girl off the road and tried to assault her.

Commissioner Rajnus To Serve On Wildlife Post

County Commissioner Jerry Rajnus was appointed yesterday to serve on an inter-county committee that will push for more homesteading in Lower Klamath wildlife refuges.

The committee will be composed of Rajnus, representing the Klamath County Court, and other representatives from Tulelake Irrigation District, Klamath Irrigation District, Siskiyou County Supervisors and Modoc County Supervisors.

Purpose of the committee, as stated by Sam Anderson, Tulelake Irrigation District president, is "to continue to press for a solution in which the maximum areas of land would be placed in private ownership."

Decision to form such a committee was made by representatives of the interested groups at a recent joint meeting.

Proponents of additional homesteading have long maintained that too much good farm land has been reserved for wildlife by the federal government.

In other action yesterday, Klamath County Court rescinded a May 7 action in which it granted vacation rights for a portion of the Midland townsite, eight miles south of here.

Four interested residents appeared before the court and protested its action. A check of the legalities involved was made and it was found that owners adjacent to the land to be vacated had not been notified of the proposal. Adjacent owners must give consent.

The court set May 28 for an additional hearing. In the meantime, the district attorney will contact the adjacent owners.

Land vacations involve changing the area concerned from a lot-and-block status to an acreage or agricultural status, which results in a lower assessed valuation for tax purposes and eliminates the necessity of reserving portions for roads.

Appearing to protest were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gray, Joe Frost and H. C. Casebier.

Nursery Ships Huge Tree Total

A whopping total of 13,389,800 trees was shipped by the Col. W. B. Greeley Forest Nursery of the Industrial Forestry Association in the six and a half months ended April 30. This was the largest crop in the 17-year history of the nursery, which is located at Nisqually, Washington, and brings its total output of trees for artificial reforestration to the 93 million mark.

This year's crop was used to plant trees on over 24,000 acres of tree farm land in western Oregon and Washington, according to W. D. Hagenstein, executive vice president of the association.

"Coupled with the excellent forest fire prevention record of the last 15 years, the nursery's trees have now restored more than 170,000 acres of once idle land," Hagenstein said. "The industry had also direct-seeded, mostly by helicopter, more than 40,000 acres this past winter."

Hagenstein pointed out that natural reseeding has brought nearly 10 million acres back into young trees over the last 50 years, but he predicted a continous increase in artificial reforestration.
