As You Were Saying...

The Bus Driver's Briefing. It was Sunday morning and the scenic bus tour from our resort hotel was about to begin. The pleasant-faced driver closed the door, turned to the passengers, and held up his hand. Thinking he was about to brief us on the wonders of the tour, we grew quiet.

"This being Sunday," he said, "I think it's fitting we start out by saying the Lord's Prayer."

Surprised but willing, the passengers droned out the words. As we finished, he continued, "Let's all sing one verse of 'Onward Christian Soldiers.'" When the last note died, he smiled and said, "Now, don't you feel a little better?"

We did, and his thoughtful act made the tour more enjoyable and one to be long-remembered.—Verda Ross, San Bernardino, Calif.

Teen-Age Ambassadors. Last Summer I sailed on a 2½-month trip to Europe with 750 high-school students. Through the American Field Service Organization each of us lived with a family in one of 17 foreign nations to learn about their way of life. In return, we were to tell them all we could about America.

I spent the Summer in Westfalen, Germany, and I'm sure I'll never again have such a rewarding experience. I learned how understanding the people of another land can be. I gained new respect for these polite, hard-working folks and their age-old customs.

Through such an experience, one can't help become more grown-up, mature, and broad-minded. I believe the motto of A.F.S. speaks for itself: Walk together, talk together, all ye peoples of the earth; only then can we have peace!—Carol Hagerman, Springfield, Mo.

"South Winds Blow Soft..." In a small, unused corner of our farm is a cemetery which, until two years ago, was an abandoned wilderness. When a group of amateur historians from the community began poking around, cleaning away brush and trees, they probed the sod and found a broken tombstone.

The inscription was barely legible; it said, "Nehemiah Vaughn, Company C, 38th Regiment, Iowa Volunteers, Died 1864." And underneath, "South winds blow soft where the soldier is lying."

A Civil War hero, and he had been buried and forgotten for nearly 100 years.

The historians finished the task of resurrecting the cemetery until it became a thing of beauty. Last Memorial Day, we added the final touch. We placed a flag on Nehemiah's grave, and it waved proudly in the soft South wind.—Mrs. Floyd Munson, Lawler, Iowa.

Beau Geste. One of the sweetest thoughts I've ever heard expressed was made by a young friend of mine. On his wife's birthday he sent his mother-in-law a card, saying, "Thanks! I'm glad it was a girl."—Mrs. Max Laycock, Tuscaloosa, Ala.
