

Court Locked In Dispute

Klamath County Court Wednesday was still pre-occupied with a dispute which has arisen over proposed vacation of a portion of Midland Townsite, eight miles south of here.

Charles Bennett, a landowner in the area, has asked for the vacation of the land, which in effect would change its tax status from lots and blocks to lower-taxed farm land.

The court on May 7 granted the vacation, but last Wednesday this action was protested by four other adjacent owners.

Their contentions, later substantiated by District Attorney Arthur Beddoe, was that owners adjacent to the land proposed for vacation must give unanimous consent.

Such consent had not been obtained and the board last week rescinded its vacation order and requested the district attorney to investigate.

At a continued hearing yesterday, adjacent owners contended they would not have access to their property if the land were vacated, since no areas would then have to be reserved for roads.

Beddoe said he will submit a report to the county court. Meanwhile, no decision on the vacation has been made. The district attorney said the owners involved may have to get together on trades or compromises for the proposed vacation to be effected.

At yesterday's meeting a side issue arose involving ownership of land in the same Midland area. Beddoe said Bennett claims to have paid taxes on three parcels since 1948. However, the official declared, an investigation showed the parcels in question were foreclosed on by the county in 1953 for non-payment of taxes and sold to Raymond Gray in that year. Gray has paid taxes on the parcels since that time, Beddoe said he has learned.

Indian Bureau Sets Land Sale

The Bureau of Indian Affairs completed plans recently for the last sale of Indian allotted lands prior to the beginning of termination activity of the reservation.

The final land sale is scheduled for 2 p.m. Tuesday, June 3, at the Klamath Agency Office.

This final sale will offer 57 parcels of land to highest bidders, providing their bid is equal to or in excess of the appraised value of such property.

The majority of the tracts are 160 acres or less, and are classified as timbered, grazing or farm land.

Prospective bidders can secure complete listing of the lands to be sold by contacting the Bureau of Indian Affairs office at Klamath Agency.

Bus Hearing Set For June Fourth

A hearing has been announced by the state public utility commissioner for 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, June 4, at the Lake County Court-house, Lakeview, on a request by Red Ball Stage Line, Inc., Klamath Falls, to use two-wheel trailer units in conjunction with passenger bus operations between Klamath Falls and Lakeview.

John K. Sayre, local Red Ball agent, explains that during the Christmas mail season, its run to Lakeview leaving here at 3:15 a.m. is sometimes overloaded, and the trailer is needed. This is all right, unless there is a passenger—which there rarely is. State rules prohibit the operation of motor vehicles transporting passengers "with any trailer or any other vehicle attached thereto" without special authorization from the commissioner.

So the request seems to have no earth-shaking implications, but its granting will make Red Ball happy to see a passenger even in the early morning hours of Christmas Eve.

Property Tax Revise Seen

Property tax assessments on downtown properties might be adjusted either upward or downward for fiscal '58-'59 taxing purposes, it was learned Wednesday.

The Klamath County Board of Equalization, meeting in the courthouse, has taken under advisement a survey of property valuations made by the State Tax Commission at the board's request.

On hand to present the survey yesterday was T. S. Cady, an urban supervisor for the commission.

The survey was made in recent weeks and reportedly reflects current market values of downtown properties. Assessed values, on which property taxes are based, are determined from market values.

If the equalization board should re-assess values up or down, it would necessarily change the assessments already set by Clyde Caldwell, county assessor. The board's authority supersedes that of the assessor.

Properties surveyed by the tax commission include those on Main Street, South Sixth Street and other downtown areas.

In order to study the survey completely before acting, the equalization board has requested from the tax commission additional time to deliberate on assessments.

Originally, the board was to have changed or approved Caldwell's assessments by this week-end. It's new deadline will now be June 7. It can obtain another extension beyond that, if it desires.

If after the board's action on a particular assessment, the property owner feels he has been treated unfairly, he may appeal to the State Tax Commission. If the commission upholds the county equalization board, the owner may further appeal to the circuit court.

Local Group Plans Luncheon

A no-host luncheon will be held Monday in the Winema Hotel at which a board of directors to head the Klamath Falls Community Council will be elected by those attending.

Purpose of the new organization will be to coordinate plans for better health, welfare and recreation services in this area.

Also to be presented at the Monday meeting is a report by the newly appointed Ways and Means Committee, recommending a constitution, bylaws, and articles of incorporation for the new agency. Those attending will discuss and probably approve the suggested steps.

Everyone interested in the new organization is urged to attend the meeting by Pat O'Connor, temporary chairman. Reservations should be made by calling TU 2-5558 by Monday at 10 a.m.

Wall Street Expert Sees Bull Market Until 1962.

By ELMER C. WALZER

UPI Financial Editor. NEW YORK (UPI)—A leading Wall Street expert holds that we still are in a bull market and that it will last until 1962 which in his reckoning would make it a 20-year bull movement, the longest in history.

That expert is Arthur Wiesenberger, head of the stock exchange firm that bears his name. He believes that one can reduce cash holdings now by purchasing common stocks. Last July he recommended a 70 percent investment, 30 percent liquid. Now he would cut the cash down by one third and buy more stocks.

As Wiesenberger calculates the bull market, it started on April 29, 1942 when the Dow-Jones industrial average closed at 92.92. It hasn't gone down to anywhere near that level since, and hence the argument would seem to hold that the bull market still is in progress.

Other calculations have brought out several bull and bear markets since that date and some of them say we currently are in a bear market.

But most of the experts agree with his thesis on bull market phases:

"Every long bull market comprises three phases: (1) recovery from the fear and panic of the previous decline; (2) a further recovery and extension of stock prices, based upon solid business improvement and resultant earnings and dividend expansion; and (3) a further great rise that feeds upon inflation and a contented rosy view of the future. It is this last rise which sows the seeds for the subsequent inevitable whirlwind."

He sees no signs of this bull market ending.

"We date the beginning of this market at April 28, 1942," he says. "The 12 prior years witnessed the precipitous decline from 1929 to 1932, then the series of bounces that came to rest in 1942, while the welfare State was conceived and brought through infancy and adolescence."

So far in this bull market he finds two phases—the period of 1942-1946 the first and the period

1949-1956 the second. The third, which he says is a period of inflation and drastic over-valuation based on wild, unrestrained speculations of the future, hasn't been seen yet.

This third phase, he notes, could be omitted but "history suggests that this will not be the case."

This is a market in slow motion so there's no need for haste in buying securities, Wiesenberger says.

He notes further that this market may be somewhat vulnerable to reaction over the period immediately ahead, and adds that if prices should come down a favorable opportunity to do some buying would occur.

"But whether they do or not," he adds, "it seems the part of wisdom, in the light of all available evidence, to reduce reserves by about one-third over the next five or six weeks."

This categorical statement on the bull market is the first of its kind to come in a long time. The general run of brokerage comment has been cautious with most of the recommendations in defensive issues.

Some of the fund managers have said they were bearish on the market for the near term and Wiesenberger admits the market may have a bit of difficulty.

Wall Street generally is impressed with the behavior of the market in recent weeks, noting that on each reaction trading lightens and on each rally it picks up.

Wiesenberger says.
