

ROSEMARY SPETZ

KU Concert Mistress To Enroll At Portland State

A Klamath Falls girl, 1958 graduate of Klamath Union High School, Rosemary Spetz, 18, will take no time out for vacationing by the seashore, climbing a high mountain, or dabbling her toes in a wandering brook.

Rosemary, who has been concert mistress of KUHS orchestra and vocalist in the a cappella choir, will leave June 5 to enroll in Portland State College where she will continue her study of the violin under a former Klamath Falls resident who is well known in musical circles, Wayne Angel. She has been studying violin and piano for seven years, four years of that time under Harry Borel who this week said that the young musician is "born to be a violinist, and has made outstanding progress in her study of the instrument."

by John D. O'Connor, onetime resident and instructor in Klamath Falls, who was a music judge during the Southern Oregon District Music Competition in Ashland in March. Rosemary played Chopin's B Flat Nocturne to rate a one-plus from the judges.

She was one of nine students from KUHS musical groups to play in the May Festival on Pacific University Campus appearing with a 100-piece orchestra. Rosemary has studied under Andrew Loney Jr., director of the KUHS A Cappella Choir, M. Dale Hallack, director of the KUHS orchestra, and as a private piano pupil of Marie Obenchain, this city. She has been junior choir organist at St. Paul's Episcopal Church for two years. Rosemary is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus V. Spetz, 1611 Cross Street.

Pulitzer Prize Reporter Modest, Quiet, Unassuming

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Kirke Simpson, who wrote a news story that became a classic, is still modest and unassuming.

In 1921 Simpson, a member of the Associated Press Washington staff, covered the burial of the Unknown Soldier and won worldwide acclaim for his account. Now 77, tall and lean, his eyes crinkle as he recalls those dull, gray days so long ago.

He has not written a news story in 12 years, but he has a good reporter's memory for details.

"On Nov. 9, 1921," he recalled, "we were getting ready to go down to the Washington Navy Yard to meet the cruiser Olympia, Adm. George Dewey's flagship at Manila. It was bringing in the Unknown Soldier from France. I remember one of the War Department officials said, 'I hope the press makes an epoch out of this and not a eulogy.'"

Simpson had known war from first hand. As a lad of 17 he was a bugler in the Philippines during the Spanish American War. It was there he memorized the words of the Army call, "Taps." It was there, too, that he became a fan of Robert Louis Stevenson, whose "Requiem" lent Simpson the mood, simplicity and tone for his Unknown Soldiers stories.

"I never thought of myself as an important writer," he said. "I don't to this day. I always appreciated good writing though. I read a lot by Robert Louis Stevenson, Jack London and others."

He was a friend of Jack London's in the great novelist's heyday in San Francisco, Simpson's birthplace.

After the Spanish-American War Simpson came home to California and went into the newspaper business. He was on the Oakland Tribune and then a small newspaper in Tonopah, Nev. By 1914 he was in Washington with The Associated Press.

On his assignment to write the Unknown Soldier stories, he went in the long line that filed past the catafalque to capture the feeling of the crowd.

Later he picked up his friend Steve Early, then an AP editor in Washington and subsequently press secretary to President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Together they went to Arlington for the entombment.

Simpson's lead on that event leaned heavily on Robert Louis Stevenson.

Stevenson's "Requiem" begins: "Under the wide and starry sky, dig the grave and let me lie."

Simpson began his story: "Under the wide and starry skies of his own home land, America's unknown dead from France sleeps tonight, a soldier home from the wars."

As he neared the end, he realized he needed something that would cut right through to the hearts of the American people. He remembered the lines of "Taps." And they rolled from his typewriter:

"Fades the light
And afar
Goeth day, cometh night
And a star,
Leadeth all, speedeth all
To the rest."

That did it. There was a clamor for the name of the author of the newspaper articles. The ban on by-lines in The AP was relaxed and Kirke Simpson won the first Pulitzer Prize ever awarded a news agency man.

Church Sets Bible Tales

"We worship the Lord," is the theme that will be carried out through Bible stories, handicrafts, games, songs and playlets in the First Christian Church Daily Vacation Bible School. This school is open to all children who will be entering the public school by 1959 through those who have completed the eighth grade. The school will be in session from 9 to 11:30 each morning, Monday through Friday, June 26 and June 27-28.

The missionary study will be on India and the work of the Christian Church missionaries in India.

A staff of 45 teachers and helpers have been preparing for this fine school. Included on the staff are Arlene Skauget, director; Otis R. Bell, minister; Jerry Ruth Wickersham, song leader; Fern Sturgeon, pianist. Workers with the preschool children are Mrs. Edna Hammond, Mrs. Bonnie Lloyd, Lela Baker, Mrs. Marilyn Breithaupt, Mrs. Bobbie Tennigkeit, Mrs. Marilyn Rose, Mrs. Beulah Albers, Mrs. Beulah Brisson, Mrs. Ethel Martin, Mrs. Burnice Crisley, Mrs. Carol Childers, Mrs. Lucille Clark and Judy Pohl. With the primary department grades one and three will be Mrs. Bonnie Adamson, Jonnie Bell, Betty Sturgeon, Mrs. Lela Bridges, Mrs. Louise Homer, Mrs. Barbara Baumgardner, Virginia Morrow, Claudia Geist, Mrs. Zena King, Mrs. Virginia James, Mrs. Alda Baker, Mrs. Wilma Jessup and Emogene Thompson. Working with the junior teen-age department, grades four and eight, will be Mrs. Beverly Webb, Mrs. Erma Miller, Mrs. Ruth Musselman, Mrs. Bobbie Ashby, Joan Carson, Mrs. Ruby Daffier, Mrs. Maud Christensen, Mrs. William Carter, Mrs. Joyce Barrett, Mrs. Evelyn Thompson, Mrs. Wilma Keesee, Carolyn Devoss, Mrs. Mae Berry and Mrs. Hazel Sturgeon. Other men and women of the congregation will help prepare materials the school.

Unusual projects this year will be the construction of a small tabernacle by each child, one large wooden scale model for the church and a course in Bible Drama led by Mrs. Beverly Webb for the older young people.

EXHUMING TRIP

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Dr. Jesse D. Jennings recently led a 10-man party on a 150-mile trip down the Colorado River, but the jaunt was not for pleasure. Dr. Jennings, head of the anthropology department at the University of Utah, made the trip as part of a long-range project to salvage remains of prehistoric Utah dwellers from an area that eventually will be submerged by waters of Glen Canyon Dam.
