

Work Struggle Developing In Presbyterian Church

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A continuing struggle was evident among Presbyterians today over a move to set up a sort of fair employment practices system in the church.

The objective cited is to assure Negro ministers an equal chance to get pulpits.

An asserted custom of assigning ministers to congregations of racial makeup akin to their own came under criticism at the assembly of the newly merged United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Some leaders want the procedure changed, terming it conducive to racial discrimination. Others, however, oppose any change.

New regulations were proposed by the Pittsburgh Presbytery which would bar any designation of race or color in denominational files on clergymen, and require that assignments be made without regard to such factors.

However, delegates voted to delay action on the measure for a year's study, after several advised a cautious approach.

In offering the measure, the Pittsburgh Presbytery (group of churches) said the denomination is clearly committed to work for a nonsegregated church in a nonsegregated society and should therefore mend its own fences.

Opinion is sharply divided on the proposal. A total of 36 presbyteries have come out in favor of it, while 59 others have expressed opposition.

Meanwhile, leaders of other Christian bodies hailed the merger of the two denominations — the former United Presbyterian Church and former Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

"What has happened here is of tremendous significance to the whole of Christendom," said the Rev. Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, of St. Louis, president of the National Council of Churches.

"It is another evidence that the many divisions of the church are being caught up by a powerful tide of Christian unity. This tide will continue to roll irresistibly from the eternal will of God . . ."

Leaders of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. Southern, which rejected an original three-way plan for its inclusion in the merger, also praised its achievement — and voiced sorrow they weren't in it.

CECILE VANDENBERG, daughter of Judge and Mrs. David R. Vandenberg, will be graduated from Marylhurst College on May 31 with the degree of bachelor of science in education. She has completed a semester of supervised teaching and will be employed in the Portland public schools next fall. Miss Vandenberg is a member of Students National Education Association and the Sodality. She has sung in the College Chorus and was a member of the orchestra for three years. This year she was carnival chairman. She will be the last of four sisters to graduate from Marylhurst. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. David R. Vandenberg Jr., was also educated there. Judge Vandenberg is a member of the college advisory board.

UPI Merger Defended By Department Of Justice

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Justice Department has held that the consolidation of United Press and International News Service into the new United Press International was exempt from the anti-trust laws because INS was in "failing circumstances."

As a result, the department said, "We do not plan at the present time to move against this acquisition" under the anti-trust laws.

Assistant Attorney General Victor R. Hansen, chief of the Anti-Trust Division, reported the department's findings in a letter to Frank H. Bartholomew, president of United Press International.

He said the department had concluded after extensive investigation that the consolidation of the two press associations "falls squarely" within the "failing corporation section" of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act.

The supreme court has construed that section as meaning that it is in bad financial shape does not have to stay in operation.

Hansen noted that the department embarked on its inquiry immediately after learning of the United Press International news service consolidation.

He wrote Bartholomew that the Anti-Trust Division "moved promptly to secure those facts relevant to any determination of legality under Clayton Act, section 7."

Hansen said the section "proscribes any acquisition which may . . . substantially . . . lessen competition, or tend to create a monopoly."

But he added that the Supreme Court has held that section 7 did not rule out consolidations where the acquired company was in so-called "failing circumstances" and where no other purchaser was available.

"With this in mind," Hansen wrote, "we have examined all the facts submitted to us. Beyond that, we have endeavored to verify such facts by independent inquiry."

"Against that background, we have concluded that INS's acquisition by UP falls squarely within the 'failing corporation exemption' to section 7 enunciated by the Supreme Court and adopted by the Congress.

"Accordingly, we do not plan at the present time to move against this acquisition under Clayton Act, section 7."

Earlier this week, Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) asked the Justice Department to seek a temporary injunction to halt consolidation of the two news services.

A justice department spokesman, who said he had been briefed by Hansen, said "The INS had showed the Justice Department that it has been losing millions of dollars for the past 14 years."

The department spokesman added that "The United Press showed the Anti-Trust Division that on foreign service it was making money and on domestic service it was losing money." He added that "on the balance the situation was not particularly favorable."

The Supreme Court decision cited by Hansen was handed down by the Supreme Court on January 6, 1930.

It involved an appeal by the International Shoe Co. from a Federal Trade Commission ruling ordering it to divest itself of the stock it had purchased in the McElwain Co., another shoe manufacturer.

The court, in a 6 to 3 decision, sustained International Shoe in its argument that it was not a violation of law for it to acquire "a corporation with resources so depleted and prospect of rehabilitation so remote, that it faces the grave probability of a business failure . . ."

It also made the added stipulation that there must not be any other prospective buyer.

The decision set aside the FTC's order against International's acquisition of McElwain.

Consul General Places Wreath

HONG KONG (AP)—U.S. Consul General James B. Fletcher today placed Memorial Day wreaths on the graves of six American World War II dead.

Those commemorated were U.S. Consul F.R. Engdahl, who died in a Japanese internment camp in Hong Kong, and five servicemen believed to have been shot down in an American bomber in 1942.

An honor guard from the U.S. seaplane tender Floyd Bay participated in the ceremony. Several representatives of the American community in Hong Kong attended.

Foreign Journalists Query Residents Of The Casbah

ALGIERS (AP)—A little group of foreign journalists, making sure nobody thought they were French walked through the streets of Algiers' famed, filthy Casbah today.

"What about your rebellion against the French?" they asked the Algerians jamming the Moslem quarter. "Has there really been a reconciliation between the French and you Moslems?"

Across the city, on the sun-swept square in front of Government House, an endless series of balcony speakers proclaims daily that "today we do not speak of the Moslems and the French of Algeria—we speak only of 10 million Frenchmen."

In the Casbah a Moslem butcher in bloody apron trims the ears off a sheep's head, points to the sky with his knife and says with an uncertain smile, "Only Allah knows if the fighting is really over."

On the Rue de Lion, more a tunnel than a street, a gold-toothed grocer opines cautiously, "Maybe. One must wait and see."

Down have come most of the barbed wire barricades around the teeming native quarter. It is a rare sight to see a red-capped Zouave soldier kicking in a door as he enters to search for hidden arms.

The Moslems once more move freely through the streets, buying generous supplies of sticky sweet honey and almond cake, mutton and fat, round loaves of bread.

Stern army measures have made Algiers virtually off limits for the rebels, who once put together potent bombs in the Casbah and slipped into the European quarter to kill and cripple. But the Moslems were sullen and subdued.

Then came the stunning "revolution of May 13"—the revolt of the army and the French colonists against the Paris regime.

With the revolution came a startling "reconciliation" between thousands of Moslems and French. By the thousands they embraced and stood together to cheer Charles de Gaulle and the rousing talk of a new Algerian, an Algeria of 10 million Frenchmen instead of a colony of one million French rulers and nine million subject Moslems.

No one can doubt there is a new and bewildering current running through this tortured country.

But someday the shouting from the balconies will be stilled, and the generals and the politicians will have settled their differences.

Then will the French in Algeria give the Moslems the equality they have denied them for 3 1/2 years?

Will the French colonists give up the paramount position they defied Paris to defend? Will the Moslem rebels abandon their fight for independence to rally around the Cross of Lorraine?

"One must wait and see," says the grocer on the Rue de Lion.

Treasury To Sell Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Treasury is offering to sell a billion dollars in long-term bonds while refinancing other indebtedness.

Plans to accept subscriptions for the long-term issue June 3 were announced yesterday.

At the same time, the Treasury said it was offering two shorter term securities in exchange for 9 1/2 billion dollars in notes and bonds maturing June 15. Holders of these expiring securities have the option of accepting the new securities or receiving cash.

The long-term bond to raise new cash came as a surprise, although there had been advance speculation that the Treasury might offer such an issue as part of its refinancing of maturing securities.

Officials said they were borrowing new cash now in hopes of delaying future cash borrowing until after July, the first month of the new fiscal year.

The new bond, to be dated June 3, will run for 26 years and 11 months and will mature May 15, 1985. Although it will carry a 3 1/2 per cent interest rate, the effective yield will be cut to 3.22 per cent by selling each $100 of the bonds for $100.50.

Treasury officials said they expect this bond to have a very slight impact on long-term interest rates and none on mortgage interest charges.

For three days starting next Wednesday, the Treasury will accept subscriptions for the shorter term securities in exchange for the expiring notes and bonds. One of these new securities will be an 11-month certificate paying 1 1/4 per cent interest. The other will be a six-year bond paying 2 1/2 per cent. Both will be dated June 15.
