Trinity Right To Work Bill Studied By Supreme Court In First California Test

LOS ANGELES, (UPI) — California Supreme Court justices today had under advisement the Trinity County right to work case.

The case, the first of its kind in the state, was initiated by the Retail Clerks Union Local 1369, a butcher's local and the Trinity County Labor Council in an effort to determine whether city or county governments have the power to enact right to work ordinances.

Attorneys for the unions argued Tuesday that passage of the Taft-Hartley Act by Congress had "pre-empted" local jurisdiction in the field. They charged that only state governments could pass right to work legislation.

Political chaos and confusion would result in all counties and cities were to enact laws outlawing closed union shops, union attorneys argued.

Trinity County attorneys contended that since California had no state law prohibiting county and city governments from taking such action that there was no reason they could not pass local right to work laws.

The court was expected to rule on the case before the November election, although it was pointed out that the case would not have any direct influence on the right to work measure which has been proposed for the ballot.

The court's decision would be considered a precedent in any future cases involving local right to work ordinances.

A second case challenging the validity of a right to work law passed by Palm Springs was indefinitely postponed when Associate Justice Marshall F. McComb disqualified himself because his daughter's husband was a partner of the law firm hired by the desert city to handle its appeal.

Floyd C. Pierce Jr., Wilson's partner during the incident, testified yesterday afternoon that Wilson "shook" Cloud, and that the latter took "two or three" steps and fell down.

But he got to his feet and was standing when the two officers departed down the hill in the party wagon, the youthful policeman said. He told the jury that at no time did he see Wilson strike Cloud "with anything." After coming off the hill, the pair went directly to police headquarters and Wilson went off duty at 10 p.m., Pierce stated.

Peace Ambulance attendant Charles A. Riggers testified he received a phone call from an unidentified man on the night of the episode. The caller said there was a man on KFJI hill who was thought to have a broken leg as a result of a fight.

Ambulance driver Leon Adreon, taking the stand next, said he drove up the hill at about 10:15 p.m., searched the area and found nothing. A "carload of Indians," he told the court, followed the ambulance up the hill and remained when he departed.

Wayne H. Loerke, chief engineer at KFJI, testified he heard rapping noises from under the floor of the station at about 7:30 a.m. the next morning, November 4.

Investigating, he found Cloud, bleeding, about half in and half out a window near ground level of the station building.

State Policeman Lawrence G. Bergmann stated from the stand he and City Detective Bud Adkins investigated the hilltop at the district attorney's request.

A man's hat was found under a tree, he stated, and grass beneath this and another tree was smashed flat and bore blood stains. He testified the distance from where Cloud was found under the station to one of the trees was 180 feet.

Bergmann stated he saw Wilson and Adkins again on November 5, the next day, about half way up KFJI hill. At this time, he testified, Wilson told him this was the spot where Cloud had been let out of the wagon.

But, he continued, on November 6, in the district attorney's office, Wilson said he had let Cloud out at the top of the hill, near the blood-stained areas.

Next witness was Kenton D. Mayfield, an OTI student, who was parked with a girl companion on the KFJI lot on the night of November 3. He said that as he was leaving, he observed a man sitting on the ground near the party wagon and a policeman standing over him. He testified it was too dark to identify the officer. The time, he said, was about 9:10 p.m. The student told jurymen he at no time saw anyone striking anyone else.

Combat Operations Center Buried Deep Underground In Europe Is Ace-In-Hole

IN WEST GERMANY, (UPI)—The vital nerve center of American air-atomic power in Central Europe is a vast underground command post that has operated in super secrecy for four years.

For the first time, the Air Force has just permitted newsmen to see this subterranean "combat operations center" and witness how it would direct retaliatory operations against the Soviets if they attack westward.

The highly automated command post, and what was seen at aircraft and missile bases, gave a picture of increasing readiness to deal counterblows on short notice.

Throughout the Kaiserlautern area in the Rhineland Palatinate, big Matador guided missiles are kept constantly pointed eastward on their launchers with crews standing by. At bases in Germany and across the border in France, 15 squadrons of F100D jet fighter bombers totalling about 375 planes comprise a potent atomic strike force in Central Europe.

From the cavernous recesses of the underground operations center, commanders could dispatch these supersonic jets and nuclear-laden guided missiles from their widely dispersed bases on 10 to 15 minutes warning of attack. Some of the planes could be on their way to Iron Curtain targets in an estimated three minutes.

While details are secret, it can be reported that the command post is able to direct the F100D aircraft all the way to their targets.

As a key element in the ever-increasing ability to react instantly to aggression, the command post is thus a powerful factor in the effort to deter war by convincing Russia that a knockout blow cannot be struck.

Under the ground rules of the reporters' visit, the location of the center may not be told even though it is acknowledged that the Soviets probably know where it is. Nearby German villagers certainly are aware that it is a beehive of Air Force activity.

Academy Idea Proposed For Space Age

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) suggested Wednesday the government set up a national academy to focus the nation's best minds on the great issues of the space age.

Unless America meets "the relentless, all-out competition of the Soviet Union," Jackson said, the United States and other Free World nations "will go downhill — and rapidly."

Jackson advanced the proposal for an official top-level brain trust in a graduation speech prepared for the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. The college trains a select group of military officers and career civilians expected to fill key government posts in the near future.

"We can hardly deny that the Kremlin now sets the pace—winning critical races of discovery, taking the initiatives, posing the challenges," Jackson said.

The United States, he said, has the tradition, the will and the talent to meet and overcome these challenges.

"What seems to be missing is a mechanism to put our best talent to work on the burning issues of national policy," he said, adding:

"We need a mechanism that can rally our learned talent in all fields — the sciences, history, economics, political science, education, languages, literature and philosophy."

To fill the gap, he urged creation of an academy on national policy.

Modoc Historical Group Observes First Birthday

ALTURAS — More than 100 persons were present for the first anniversary observance of the Modoc County Historical Society, held in the Modoc Union High School, Alturas, June 7. Mrs. Warren M. Sloss chairmanned the meeting. The meeting was preceded by a banquet.

A large exhibit of antiques was displayed by Mrs. R. Marcy Sloss, including collector's items of milk glass, pewter, silver, women's dresses, handmade quilts, family albums, Bibles, prayer books, picture frames, saddle horse equipment, chairs and lanterns.

Guests were seated at a U-shaped table with flower and taper arrangements, combined with gnarled native wood on bits of pine bark, loaned by Mrs. Lura Wardell, Alturas artist.

Theme of the party was "Wagon Trail Days," with stage properties, a wagon wheel and cow skull, adding to the old-time atmosphere. Members of Mrs. Sloss' committee wore early day costumes.

The Rev. Karl E. Olson, pastor of the Federated Church, offered the benediction.

A colorful, authentic note was the appearance of Miss Nora Ward, Fort Bidwell, who wore a grandmother's wedding dress as she sang "The Spinning Wheel," with a spinning wheel as a background. Mrs. Fred Huffman at the piano accompanied Larry Gillilan on the clarinet for several numbers. Warren M. Sloss led the community singing. Mrs. Irvine Grove, Cedarville, member of the California Historical Society, spoke on the history of roads criss crossing Modoc County, Fort Bidwell members put on an Indian skit as Miss Ward sang, "Indian Love Call." Ken McLeod, president of the Klamath County Historical Society, Klamath Falls, invited those present to attend a picnic at Merrill sponsored by the Siskiyou and Klamath County historical societies.

Mrs. Lee James, Adin, organizer of the Modoc County Historical Society, assisted by Judge A. K. Wylie, president, cut the birthday cake. Both made brief talks.

New officers will be elected at a potluck luncheon meeting in the social hall of the Federated Church, Sunday afternoon, June 22.

Cross Burned On Negro Yard

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two teenage boys have confessed to lighting a cross on the lawn of Negro Assistant District Attorney Cecil Poole last Thursday.

The youths, along with another youth indirectly involved, were ordered to appear in Juvenile Court today.

One boy is the 16-year-old son of a physician and the other is the 17-year-old son of a dentist. They live not far from the Poole home in the well-to-do Ingleside district.

The boys told police it was a spur of the moment prank. They also said they were "sorry."

They had originally decided to burn the cross on the lawn of a 20-year-old friend. As they were planting it on his lawn, the friend dashed out of his house and suggested they find a Negro home. They then went to the Poole home.

Poole's 6-year-old daughter found the cross the next morning when she and her father were setting out for school.

Sears Boosts Ad Spending

Sears, Roebuck and Company in 1957 invested a record-breaking $46,472,000 in newspaper advertising space, Bob Egge, local Sears store manager, said recently.

This total marked the 12th consecutive year of record newspaper advertising expenditure for Sears and topped 1956's previous high of $45,479,000 by 2.2 per cent, Egge said.

Sears 1957 expenditure was spread among 993 daily and weekly newspapers located in every state and amounted to 277,231,200 lines of advertising.

Egge stated that his company's newspaper dollar expenditure in 1957 represented 78.1 per cent of Sears total local retail advertising expenditure. The total retail media expense of $59,510,000 was also a record high, exceeding the 1956 figure by three per cent.

Other local media which shared in a $13,038,000 national expenditure last year included radio and television, circulars and direct mail.

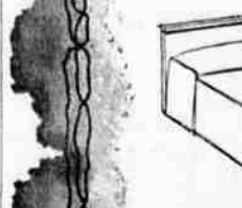

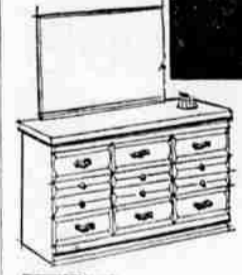

In 1957 Sears had retail and mail order sales amounting to $3,600,000,222, the largest in the firm's 71-year history. The company added seven new stores during the year to bring the total in this country, as of January 31, 1958, to 724, Egge said.

Right To Work Backers Meet

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Supporters of the so-called right to work initiative met Tuesday to map strategy for getting the measure qualified for the November ballot.

Persons attending the meeting came from Northern and Southern California. However, their names were not disclosed "because of fears of reprisals," a spokesman said.

Roger D. Lapham, former mayor of San Francisco and chairman of the Right To Work Committee for Northern California, said 221,000 valid signatures already have been filed.

Lapham said a supplemental filing of names will be made on June 13. He said about 230,000 additional signatures would be filed.

It will take 322,429 valid signatures to qualify the measure.

"We are going right ahead to get this issue before the people at the November general election and all our initiative petitions will be filed shortly," Lapham said.
