Whose Voice Is That? Net Bradford

A player wears a handkerchief over his eyes and carries a cane. The other players form a circle, holding hands, and dance around him, singing some popular song they agree upon. After the song they stand still. The blinded player holds out his cane and the person pointed to grasps it. The blind man utters three cries and the person holding the cane imitates him. The blinded player must guess the imitator, otherwise the game starts over again. It's fun!

"My might and mane are greatly feared;
No one can make me shave my beard,"

"And I enjoy the richest feasts
Because I am the King of Beasts!"
