White And Pink Are Colors Chosen By Marie Nicholson, Recent Bride Of D. K. Moore At Fort Klamath

Fort Klamath Community Church was the setting for a wedding of wide interest in Southern Oregon on Saturday, May 31, when Marie Louise Nicholson became the bride of Douglas K. Moore.

The Rev. David E. Schneider of Fort Klamath and Chiloquin Community Methodist churches, read the double-ring marriage service at 3:30 p.m., in the presence of 140 guests, many of them out-of-town.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart E. Nicholson, well-known Fort Klamath cattle ranchers. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Ralph Shay, Netarts, Oregon; and Guy E. Moore, Portland.

Arrangements of pink majestic daisies and basket bouquets of white gladioli against a background of woodwardia fern decorated the altar where the young couple exchanged nuptial vows. Pews were marked with small bouquets of the pink daisies and white gladioli tied with white satin and pink lace ribbon, carrying out the bride's color theme.

Mrs. Gerald Wolff, Chiloquin, was organist. She played the traditional wedding marches and accompanied vocal soloist, Carole Moore, sister of the bridegroom, who sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Escorted to the altar by her father who gave her in marriage, Marie was lovely in an all-white wedding gown of lace and tulle over fine taffeta. The fitted bodice was made with long bridal pointed sleeves of lace, the low vee neckline was bordered in scalloped lace with sequin and pearl embroidery outlining the floral design. The lace yoke tapered to a point at the center front of the slender waist, which was emphasized by the billowing skirt of tulle.

Two wide bands of scalloped lace, encircled the bouffant skirt between the hipline and an extremely full, wide flounce of tulle that flowed into a chapel train.

A small, forward circlet of pearl and sequin-trimmed lace held her fingertip veil of illusion. For her bridal bouquet she carried a white Rainbow Bible topped with a large white orchid and satin streamers knotted with stephanotis florets.

For the traditional something old, new, borrowed and blue, Marie's bridal trousseau included: a handkerchief belonging to Mrs. Ira F. Orem; her bridal ensemble, and a blue garter, borrowed from Mrs. Robert E. Driesner, the former Joan Loosley, who was a bride of last fall; and a lucky penny in her slipper.

Maid of honor, Francine Hough, Corning, California; and bridesmaids, Enid Williams, childhood friend of the bride, Creswell; and Mrs. William Nicholson, the bride's sister-in-law, wore identical gowns of bridal pink embroidered eyelet organza over taffeta. They were designed with low, square necklines, brief sleeves and gathered bustlines above snug midriffs held with four bands of mayflower-rose velvet ribbon tied in front with two bows—one plain at the top and one at the bottom row with long streamers floating down the front of full waltz length skirts.

Their picture hats were of pink horsehair braid, with frosted pink velvet streamers at the back, and they carried matching horsehair flower baskets filled with white marguerite daisies.

Ringbearer for his aunt's wedding was Larry Nicholson, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Nicholson.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Nicholson chose a mauve-pink lace sheath lined with taffeta. The bodice was made with bracelet length sleeves and chiffon that tapered to the back into a floating back panel. She wore a matching pink coiffette, white accessories, and her corsage was of stephanotis and pink Elle roses.

Mrs. Shay, for her son's wedding, wore a sheath of pink tucked nylon over taffeta, encircled at the waisline with a satin cummerbund. Her accessories were black patent and pink, and her corsage was of white roses with delicate touches of pink lace.

John M. Cox, Portland, was best man for his brother-in-law; ushers were Joseph Kelley, also Portland, a roommate of the bridegroom at Oregon State College; and William Nicholson, the bride's brother, Fort Klamath.

The reception was at the Civic Improvement Club immediately following the ceremony. The pink and white colors chosen by the bride for her wedding prevailed in room and table decor at the reception. White gladioli, white Esthec Reed daisies and candytuft were used in room arrangements. Pink Elle roses and stephanotis on maiden hair fern, encircled the base of the elaborate four-tiered cake that centered the white lace-over-pink covered bride's table.

With the exception of the first slice cut by the nuptial couple, the cake was cut and served by Mrs. Ira F. Orem, assisted by
