'Three Faces Of Schultzy' Are Gold Mine To Cummings

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
NEA Staff Correspondent
HOOLYWOOD (NEA) — You've seen or heard about "The Three Faces of Eve," of course. But do you know about the three faces of Ann? — Ann B. Davis? Or "Schultzy" to you, the Emmy winning comedienne of "The Bob Cummings" TV show. The sharp-witted, rubber-face doll who wears her hair in a bun atop her head and a sign, "I Want A Man," in her eyes.
There is Ann's TV face of Schultzy. That you know. But even while she is working on a sound stage in Hollywood, there is the face of Ann 3,000 miles away in Lexington, Massachusetts.
The face is the same—of Ann's identical twin sister Harriet Norton. When Harriet twists her hair into a bun atop her head she can fool J. Edgar Hoover into believing she's Ann, Or Schultzy.
Harriet, in fact, almost joined Ann in the cast for one Cummings show during a visit to Hollywood. They dressed her like Schultzy for a double vision plot. They made a film test but Harriet, a mother and a housewife, couldn't handle the lines and the idea was shelved.
The third face of Ann is one only a few people have seen.
She used it as an unknown comedienne in a little downstairs beer and wine only bistro at the wrong end of Sunset Blvd. here. Ann was known as "Typhoid Mary" in those struggling-for-recognition days.
She had a bun on her head then, too, but it was pierced by a big chicken bone set at a rakish angle. She wore a sarong, high laced shoes, horn rimmed glasses and a lei around her neck. She came out on the little stage by stages—first sticking a bare leg out from behind a curtain. The other leg and the arms and the rest of her followed, while the customers pounded heavy beer mugs on the red-topped tables.
Then Ann sang about having a romance with an Englishman in a song she says "made no sense at all." Her salary didn't make sense, either. A couple of dollars or so a night. But "Typhoid Mary" helped the career of Ann B. Davis far more than all of her six years of little theater, stock companies and touring musicals in the bush leagues.

People in Hollywood who knew people who knew other people passed the word about Ann's flair for comedy. One of these people was an agent and after a couple of passes at the movie studios—all turned her down—Ann auditioned for the role of Schultzy.
There was no question about it. She was Schultzy.
Every now and then on the show Ann comes up with some fourth face to keep the laughs coming. Like when she slipped her head into a blonde wig and her hips into a high gear wiggle for a Marilyn Monroeish character call "Flaming Charmaine."
Charmaine was quite a challenge. But it's why, after three years as Schultzy, Ann isn't a bit weary or frustrated, like some TV series-show regulars, about the limitations and the monotony of it all.
"Our writer, Paul Henning, is a genius," Ann says. "He keeps throwing challenges at me."
The Ann B. (for Bradford) Davis who ditched plans to study medicine at the University of Michigan, switching to drama (class of '48), is a native of Schenectady, New York, and a member of the "I Liv. Alone and Like It" Club. She has a Hollywood bungalow, where she chatters to a French poodle and a parakeet and where she cooks, reads "science fiction hair raisers and keeps a weight chart—"I have to count calories"—which is down 30 pound points since 1953.
But quite unlike Schultzy, there are nights when Ann hits the night club beat on the arm of some male pal and takes tourists by surprise with a mean rumba. She's a doll with romantic frustrations on TV, but she's had her chances as Ann, she will tell you.
