Tiddlywinks Catching On With British Muscle Set

LONDON (AP) — Tiddlywinks used to be for kids.

But in Britain lately the game has caught the interest of muscular athletes, intellectuals, and even the royal family.

To play tiddlywinks you take a firm hold of a bone or plastic disk and snap other disks around a table.

At Cambridge University there is talk, admittedly on the sophomoric side, of making tiddlywinks an event of the Olympic Games.

Why the sudden upsurge in the popularity of the humble little game? No one really knows, but possibly the lazy weather of recent weeks has something to do with it. It's more fun than irregular verbs.

Tiddlywinks, a very old game not figuring conspicuously on the sports pages, got lifted into the academic atmosphere at Cambridge, where students idled away some spare time snapping the disks. Cambridge organized a team—Peter Downes, captain — and claimed the world's tiddlywinks championship. There being no other known contender, Cambridge's claim was secure until the University of Oxford challenged.

There was a noisy match, and Oxford won by an eyebrow, 113 to 111. So presumably Oxford holds the championship, but Cambridge protested that the play was an unimportant preliminary to serious, official tiddlywinks competition.

Oxford received a challenge from the University of Pennsylvania and the Oxford captain Elliott Langford, agreed to take his mates to America next year if they can raise the fare for the journey.

Then the Goons, popular troupe of entertainers, challenged Cambridge and invited a conspicuous athlete, Prince Philip, to join their team. From Buckingham Palace the prince issued a light-hearted statement saying:

"While practicing secretly I pulled an important muscle in the second, or tiddly, joint of my winking finger."

Being partial to polo, the prince indicated that tiddlywinks must take a secondary place in his esteem, and added:

"This is naturally very disappointing, but at least it gives my side (the Goons) a much better chance to win."

Now Oxford challenged the House of Commons. Lawrence Turner, who represents Oxford in Parliament, agreed to organize a team of tiddling lawmakers.

So tiddlywinks is snowballing, and there are indications that there will have to be a world conference to lay down some rules. The kids, who up to now have monopolized the game, play it without umpires, or precise laws.

But in Britain there is a rudimentary literature of tiddlywinks, and one manual says:

"Take an egg cup, and set it in the center of a blanket spread taut on a table."

Two competitors each get five winks, the little disks which they lay on the blanket, and press down on them with the tiddly, the shooting disk, in such a clever manner that the winks are snapped and made to jump into the egg cup. The wink is prone to kiss the lip, as in golf, and then dunder off somewhere else.

Less expert players, the manual suggests, might start off with a somewhat larger target, like a beer stein or a bowler (derby hat).

Right-To-Work Wins Court OK

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas Supreme Court ruled Monday the proposed right-to-work constitutional amendment should be submitted to the voters at the November general election.

Atty. Gen. John Anderson had challenged the validity of a resolution passed by the 1957 Legislature submitting the amendment to the voters in ballot title form.

Anderson contended the ballot title was defective and misleading.

The Supreme Court ruled that the amendment should be printed in full on the ballot.

School Unit Files Suit

TULELAKE—A dispute involving property and school funds was made known with the filing of a suit in superior court at Yreka by the Tulelake Joint Union High School District against the Siskiyou Union High School District from which Tulelake withdrew July 1, 1957.

The Tulelake District claims it is entitled to $54,418.64, which the district lists as its proportionate share of $280,749.95 in the Siskiyou Union High District general fund at the time the districts separated.

In addition, the Tulelake District asks that the title to furnishings and other property in the Tulelake school be cleared.

Superior Judge James Allen set Monday for appearance of Siskiyou District representatives to appear in court to show cause why the Tulelake District should not receive a share of the general fund.

Girl Gang Strikes Here

Police reported today they are investigating the latest in a series of apparently unprovoked attacks by teen-age girls upon other girls in the neighborhood around Oregon Avenue and Upham Street.

Latest victim was 13-year-old Barbara Hamilton of 1135 Lincoln Street. Her mother came into the police station to report her daughter was assaulted at Worden and Upham Sunday evening.

Questioning the girl, police were told she was on her way to the grocery when three girls approached her and for no apparent reason began striking her in the stomach and face.

She suffered a bloody nose and torn blouse in the melee, which was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. George Schroeder, 1301 Worden.

Officers said they have received several recent complaints of teen-age attacks of the same nature in the neighborhood.

Girl Scores 'Near Thing'

Six-year-old Pamela Hall was one of the luckiest little girls in town last Saturday night when she escaped serious injury after running into the side of a moving car.

The car's driver, Albert L. Stone of 133 Hillside Avenue, told police he was driving on Stukel Street between East Main and Martin when the near-tragedy occurred.

Investigating officers learned Pamela and her two sisters, Damon, 8, and Cindy, 4, were playing in Stukel Park shortly before the mishap.

A 12-year-old boy, brandishing a toy wooden knife, chased the girls, apparently in fun.

However, they told police they became frightened and dashed from the park into the street and Pamela ran into the side of the Stone auto.

She was knocked to the pavement but escaped with only skinned knees, a skinned right elbow and skinned right side.

The girls are visiting at 337½ East Main Street here. They are from Oklahoma. Police did not hold Stone who came into the station to report the mishap.

Boats Meet, Lad Hurt

Collision of two outboard motorboats Saturday on Lake of the Woods resulted in a cut on the head for 10-year-old Jerry Nicodemus and two damaged craft. The lake at the time was thickly populated with small boats of every description.

According to reports of persons involved, Bob Nicodemus, 829 Grant Street, Klamath Falls, was water skiing behind a 14-foot boat being handled by Mrs. Nicodemus with Jerry as passenger. A boat owned by Don Dunlap, Route 1, Jacksonville, Oregon, carrying four or five passengers, collided with Mrs. Nicodemus as the Dunlap party and a second outboard were closing in. Handlers of these two boats failed, they said, to see the Nicodemus boat.

The collision threw young Jerry down into the boat and cut a gash on his head. His father was thrown into the water and rescued as were those in the second boat involved. That craft sunk, but was later towed to shore. Its occupants, all thrown out, were picked up by nearby boaters.

Child Left In Locked Car

A 24-year-old Chiloquin woman was arrested by police Saturday for leaving a 6-month-old infant alone in a locked car.

Officers said they saw the child inside the car crying. Obtaining information from the auto's registration, they later arrested Frances R. Jackson who was attending the carnival.

The baby, Kirk, was taken to the juvenile home and the woman was released after posting $25 bail. This morning she did not appear in court and the bail was forfeited.

The Jackson woman explained to police that she was not the baby's mother and was seeking to find the mother when she left the child in the car.

Juvenile authorities said today the infant may end up in a foster home after the mother is found.

Assault Case Heard Today

Two women who allegedly used a pocket knife to assault another in the back seat of a parked auto last Tuesday night near the carnival grounds appeared in court this morning.

Charlene Eggsman of Chiloquin pled guilty to assault and battery and received a six months jail sentence from District Judge D. E. Van Vactor.

The other accused, Ethel Lugo Hood, also of Chiloquin, asked for time to decide on whether she wanted a preliminary hearing. The woman, charged with assault likely to produce great bodily harm, was given until Thursday to make up her mind.

Victim of the melee was Phyllis Hood who received a gash on the right cheek and cuts on the neck. She told authorities she did not know why the two other women would want to assault her.

Four Hurt In Accident

Four persons were hospitalized Saturday morning after a car driven by Louisa Barney, 21, Portland, sideswiped an auto driven by Mayor Howard M. Goodnough of Lakeview, on state Highway 66, three miles west of Bly.

State police reported that the eastbound Barney vehicle apparently veered into the westbound lane and clipped the oncoming Goodnough car, causing both to go out of control and roll over.

Mrs. Barney was apparently the most severely injured in the accident. She was taken to Klamath Valley Hospital by Peace Ambulance, where her condition was reported as "satisfactory" Monday morning. Her husband, James, who was a passenger in the car, was uninjured.

The Goodnough family was taken to the hospital in Lakeview in the disaster car from that city. Mayor Goodnough reportedly has head cuts, while Mrs. Goodnough had a broken arm and a severely lacerated knee. Two Goodnough children were cut, but apparently none of the family was in serious condition.

Freak Mishap Causes Wreck

Misfortunes of various kinds resulted for riders in two cars involved in an accident Saturday on U.S. Highway 97, six miles south of here.

The two cars, the first driven by Elmer Jackson Wilkett, 34, 2626 Laverne Avenue, and the second by Otto Brock, North Highlands, California, were headed south when the hood flew off Wilkett's car and hit the windshield of Brock's.

Brock lost control of his machine which went into a ditch. Brock was unhurt, but his son, Jerry, 21, was taken by Peace Ambulance to Klamath Valley Hospital, where his injuries were described as "not serious" Monday morning. Jerry's sister, Marsha, 15, was treated for shock.

State police report that Wilkett stopped momentarily after the accident, but then continued on south, minus his hood. He was later stopped by California Highway Patrol officers at the request of Oregon State Police. He voluntarily returned here, where he was charged with having only one headlight and improper mufflers. He was sentenced to 10 days in jail on each charge, to run consecutively, in district court Monday morning.

State police further report that a routine investigation following Wilkett's arrest revealed that he was wanted on two felony charges by Sheriff H. P. Gleason of Alameda County, California.

Wilkett is serving his sentence in Klamath County Jail, and state police report that he will be held for California authorities.

Thieves Draw Jail Sentence

Two youthful till - tappers receipted for 90 days apiece in the county jail this morning, after pleading guilty to stealing $47 from a Malin filling station's cash drawer.

Frank Ball, 22, of Chiloquin, and Verlen Bates, 18, of 3220 Boardman Street here, told Judge D. E. Van Vactor they had both been in trouble before the till-tapping escapade last week.

When the judge wanted to know what happened last Wednesday night, the pair said they had been drinking in company with a carload of other young people, including two girls.

They drove from Merrill to Malin and stopped near the filling station operated by W. B. Saunders in the latter town.

When the attendant in the station wasn't looking, they took $47 in bills and silver from the till.

Later, Bates told the judge, he became "afraid" and threw the money in some bushes near a Malin area home. Authorities recovered it after Bates told them where it was.

Judge Van Vactor explained to the youths he was giving them a "break" since the law provides for penalties of up to a year in jail and a $500 fine for petty larceny.
