SCOUT NEWS MALIN—A canoe trip down Lost River proved to be most interesting and exciting for the Malin Explorer Scouts. Two weekend trips were made under the leadership of Ed Stastny, scoutmaster. Those taking the first trip were Gary Halousek, Harry Wilson, Edwin Stastny, Ricky Illian, Harvey Milligan, Don Micka and Dave De Merrill; and in the second group were Denny Kalina, Bob Brown, Verne Cox and Don Stastny. The group put in Lost River at the head of Langell Valley and traveled downstream to the head of Poe Valley where they camped overnight. The next day they made it to below Horse Shoe Dam where they camped and then on the third day they ran out of canoeing water at Stone Bridge. The Scouts reported many hawkers nesting in the upper part of Langell Valley and that the birds were in the moulting stage and couldn't fly, thus giving the scouts a chance to observe them closely. They found that following the main channel of Lost River can be difficult in some places and that it is relatively easy to lose the channel and wind up in some cow pasture with a canoe and no water. Preparation for the trip included putting all their food in plastic bags with each meal in a separate plastic sack. Everything was tied down in the canoe and covered with waterproof material. Then in case they tipped over, everything would be protected. No major mishaps occurred.

Tulelake Basin Spraying Set For Control Of Mice

By RUTH KING after farmers became alarmed when it became apparent that hand spreading of poison bait was not checking the mouse infestation. Worsely affected areas are the Panhandle, Coppock Bay, Stronghold and the Southwest Sump. Surveys have determined that the mice have moved inland from the Basin perimeter a mile in a week. In these areas, the infestation is "much worse," farmers say than in 1957 when farmers suffered a multimillion dollar loss in the Klamath Basin. Present for the meeting were Loring White, Alturas, Modoc County agricultural commissioner; Jess Grisham, Yreka, Siskiyou County agricultural commissioner; Rollo E. Talbert, Sacramento, district supervisor for rodent and weed control, California State Department of Agriculture; John Ludemann, Sacramento, in charge of predatory rodent control for the fish and wildlife service; Jean Branson, fish and wildlife service, Tulelake headquarters; Bill Huse, Tulelake, deputy agricultural commissioner, Siskiyou County; Leroy Smith, agricultural inspector, Modoc County; Ken Baggett, Tulelake farm adviser and Clifford Jenkins, manager of the Tulelake Growers Association and Ken Baggett, Tulelake farm advisers.

Couple's Car Crashes Deer

While out for a drive last night, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Buswell got the shock of their lives when, riding in town, a young buck deer crashed into the side of their car. The couple was driving peacefully along Oregon Avenue near Johnny's Motel, when whom! they felt a terrific impact on the left side of the car. Buswell, shocked and surprised, skidded to an immediate stop not knowing at first what had happened since it was dark. Looking out of the car, he and his wife saw a young buck, antlers and all, pick himself up from the pavement, turn around and retreat between two homes on the other side of Oregon Avenue. Buswell was unable to determine how many points the buck was sporting, but he did estimate its weight at some hundred pounds. The impact had apparently not injured the animal seriously and there was no damage to the Buswell car. The Buswells operate a service station equipment business at 133 East Main Street.

Conferences May Result In Big Red Developments

By CHARLES M. McCANN UPI Foreign News Analyst Two current conferences in Eastern Europe may result in some big developments in the Communist world. Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev is visiting East Germany, the most servile of Russia's satellites. President Tito of Yugoslavia is playing host to President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic and Foreign Minister Evangelos Averoff of Greece. Khrushchev is trying to tighten discipline in the Soviet bloc of countries. His talks with Communist leader Walter Ulbricht and other East German leaders may result in further pressure against Polish Communist leader Wladyslaw Gomulka, whom the Kremlin still regards as too independent-minded. It is pretty certain also that Khrushchev will discuss possible moves against Tito, whose relations with Russia are getting steadily worse because of his refusal to get back on the Communist Party line. In addition, Khrushchev is trying to build up the prestige of the puppet East German regime. It is because of this attempt that Russia insists that the United States deal with the East German regime in negotiating for the release of nine American Army men who made a forced landing in East Germany when their fog-bound helicopter ran out of gas. Tito appears to be making a strong bid to persuade Nasser that he is making a big mistake by maintaining close relations with Russia. Tito and Nasser both seem to aim at strengthening their relations with Greece. There is talk of a possible Yugoslav-U.A.R.-Greek bloc pointed toward mutual cooperation and, if possible, the alignment of Greece in a mutual "non-committed" or "neutralist" policy. Any success along this line would naturally weaken Greece's ties with its fellow-members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The official reason for Khrushchev's visit to East Germany is his desire to attend a seven-day congress of the East German Communist Party which starts Thursday at Pankow, near Berlin. Khrushchev evidently regarded the visit as necessary. To make it, he had to ask Chancellor Julius Raab of Austria to postpone his visit to Russia, which had been set for mid-July. Just what Khrushchev and Ulbricht can cook up against Tito is hard to figure out. The Kremlin has vainly tried every means available to bring him in line. But Khrushchev might easily use East Germany as a weapon against Polish Communist leader Gomulka. Not only is Poland dependent on Russia for the raw materials which feed its industries, but Poland is sandwiched between Russia and East Germany. Khrushchev's visit may serve as a reminder to German territory and that if Russia gave the word, Poland would have to give it up.

Guard Makes Good Showing

Klamath Falls' three National Guard units made a "superior" showing at the two-week encampment recently held at Camp Clatsop. The local men earned ratings of "excellent" or higher both for performance in the camp's course of instruction and for general proficiency. In fact, two of the local units were the only ones of the 10 attending to get the top "superior" rating. The local units, equipped with 75 millimeter guns, are batteries B, C and D of the 72nd Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion, which, together with the 237th Battalion, makes up the 237th group. Each battalion consists of five batteries, the other two in the 72nd being in Ashland and Burns. The three Klamath Falls batteries comprise approximately 170 officers and men. This summer's course of instruction at Clatsop covered the firing phase of the Army training test, and included firing at radio-controlled aircraft targets. Battery B, commanded by Capt. Claude W. Biehn, and Battery C, commanded by Capt. Valentine Costanzo, scored "superior." Battery D, commanded by Capt. Paul N. Conner, was rated "excellent." In the overall training rating, which is based on the general proficiency of the troops, Battery B was again rated "superior," while C and D were rated "excellent." The three units traveled between here and Camp Clatsop by motor convoy. As usual, the encampment included a Governor's Day, during which Gov. Robert D. Holmes passed the troops in review. On another occasion, Secretary of State Mark Hatfield visited the camp and fired one of C Battery's guns.

Brush Fire Said Under Control DUNSMUIR — A brush fire on the western hillside just beyond Dr. J. W. Reynolds' home was spotted by an alert forest service lookout and quickly controlled Monday afternoon by the Dunsmuir fire department. Forest service suppression crews aided the fire department and stayed at the scene of the fire to mop up. Fire Chief James Lambert said the fire was undoubtedly caused by youngsters either smoking or playing with matches and inquiries are being made. Carelessness with fire is always a hazard, Lambert said, but in the narrow Sacramento Canyon during hot weather, such thoughtlessness could destroy the town. Parents are financially responsible for the actions of their children, Lambert warned.

Sheriff's Office Has Lost Items Sheriff Murray (Red) Britton announced today he has a number of items at his office that were lost last week during the carnival on South Sixth Street. Handed over to deputies by persons finding the items were 10 wallets, a pair of child's glasses, a number of individual keys and two bunches of keys, a child's short boot and a pair of sunglasses. These items were found on the carnival grounds or in adjacent areas. Owners may have them back if they come into the sheriff's office at the courthouse and properly identify them, Britton said.
