160 Acre Limitation In California Draws Praise

By United Press International
Quite a bit already has been said about the U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the 160 acre limitation . . . but apparently too much cannot be said about its importance.

Atty. Gen. Edmund (Pat) Brown said in a news conference recently that the decision was the best thing that happened to California legally in the eight years he has been attorney general.

Meanwhile, C. J. Haggerty, secretary-treasurer of the California State Federation of Labor, says the decision for the 160-acre limit gives a fresh boost to the state-wide campaign to qualify an initiative which would make the limitation part of state as well as federal law.

Haggerty quoted Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark, who had this to say about the 160-acre limit: "It is reasonable to limit the amount of project water available to each individual in order that benefits may be distributed in accordance with the greatest good to the greatest number of individuals. The limitation insures that the enormous expenditures will not go in disproportionate share to a few individuals with large land holdings."

Haggerty says those words from the Supreme Court spoke the view held by the state AFofL from the beginning.

He says that as efforts are made to open the state treasury to water project construction, it becomes increasingly necessary to bring state law in line with the 160-acre limit to assure that state funds also will be used for the greatest good to the greatest number of persons.

All union members and grange members have been asked to sign petitions to put the 160-acre limit on the California election ballot.

In his news conference, Brown said failure to uphold the 160-acre limit in California would have been a roadblock to the state in receiving federal aid.
