

Fan Dancer Sally Rand, 54, Retains Young Appearance

By BOB THOMAS
 AP Motion Picture Writer
 LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—What ever happened to Sally Rand?
 At a remarkable well preserved 54, she is still waving those ostrich feathers. While she's not doing it with a physics book in one hand, she claims her future lies in a scientific career. Yes, you heard it right—Sally Rand.
 "I've been going to school," she announced proudly as she lounged beside a hotel pool in a Mau-Mau, one of those formless Moussie costumes that covered her from neck to toe.
 "It took some doing, because I never graduated from high school. But I was allowed to take some courses through the University of California. I took physics, math, chemistry and psychology. And I'm proud to say that I had a 95 average.

 "I'm also proud of something else. You know all the tests and records of the university are kept by business machines. Well, the American Cyanamid Co., which has a plant in Azusa near my home town of Glendora, Calif., went through the files for employment possibilities. They pulled out my name and offered me a job starting at $800 a month. Not bad, huh?"
 Does this mean she will give up the fast-flowing fans?
 "You can't predict those things," she said. "I wanted to, I had hoped to continue school last winter. But I have problems with the tax boys. I had to go out on the road to make more money."
 She's been doing just that most of her life. Since starting 40 years ago, she has played almost every city of any size in the nation. Her big break came when she flipped the feathers at the 1933 Chicago World's Fair.
 "That wasn't just accident," she commented. "It was the result of careful planning and exploitation. I paid top money for the best minds in the business. I had to have people I could depend on. After all, there's nothing more vulnerable than a naked fan dancer."
 Sally is happily married now to Fred Lalla, a building contractor. The delight of her life is her adopted son, Sean, 9, who has been with her during her stint at the Silver Slipper here. She watched with delight as Sean swam the length of the pool—and he only learned to swim two weeks ago.
 When he isn't swimming, he is reading books with his mother. "He's going to know the value of books," Sally vowed.

Skindiver Sets Fresh Stay Record

IRVINGTON, N.J. (AP)—Skindiver Ernest J. (Red) Stevens knows the pool at Olympic Park from top to bottom.
 But especially the bottom.
 He spent 31 hours and 10 minutes there this weekend to break an underwater endurance record for skindivers.

The previous record of 30 hours and 9 minutes was set only last Friday night by Lee Emflet, a St. Louis life guard.
 Stevens, 22, slipped beneath the surface of the pool a few hours later, at 8:13 a.m. Saturday, with air tanks on his back and weighted belts around his waist.
 He had originally intended to remain down until 7 last night, but fellow skindivers who kept a watch on his condition had him surface at 3:23 p.m. Stevens had gone entirely without sleep, and fatigue was beginning to show.

Stevens, manager of the skin-diving equipment department of a Paramus store, has been engaging the sport for five years.
 His try for the record was under the direction of the Undersea Research Group of Bergen County, an organization of professional divers.

Members of the group changed Stevens' air bottles every 45 minutes and carried his liquid diet of coffee, tea and broth to him in plastic bags. They also fed him an occasional candy bar.
 Stevens read paperback mystery novels to pass the time and played cards with his buddies until the cards floated away. The underwater group then turned to checkers, using weighted pieces.

Stevens' air bottles, every 45 minutes and carried his liquid diet of coffee, tea and broth to him in plastic bags. They also fed him an occasional candy bar.
 Stevens read paperback mystery novels to pass the time and played cards with his buddies until the cards floated away. The underwater group then turned to checkers, using weighted pieces.

Stevens' air bottles, every 45 minutes and carried his liquid diet of coffee, tea and broth to him in plastic bags. They also fed him an occasional candy bar.
 Stevens read paperback mystery novels to pass the time and played cards with his buddies until the cards floated away. The underwater group then turned to checkers, using weighted pieces.

Portlanders See Sputnik Rocket

PORTLAND (AP)—Local moon-watch observers sighted the rocket section of Russia's Sputnik III satellite twice here Sunday night.
 Robert Boardwell of the moon-watch team said the rocket that propelled the satellite into orbit first came into view at 8:30 p.m., low on the southeast horizon.
 It was sighted again at 10:17 p.m. Boardwell said the local observers have tracked the rocket on four consecutive nights.
 It is expected to be visible Monday at 8:30 p.m., at a 60-degree angle in the southeast sky. It actually will be traveling from southwest to northeast.
 It is expected at a 60-degree angle in the northeast at 8:48 p.m. Tuesday and at a 25-degree angle in the northwest Wednesday. For each pass the flight will be southwest to northeast.

It is expected to be visible Monday at 8:30 p.m., at a 60-degree angle in the southeast sky. It actually will be traveling from southwest to northeast.
 It is expected at a 60-degree angle in the northeast at 8:48 p.m. Tuesday and at a 25-degree angle in the northwest Wednesday. For each pass the flight will be southwest to northeast.

New Hotel Speed Asked

PORTLAND (AP)—The Oregon corporation commissioner will be asked for early approval of the plan for financing the proposed 10 million dollar Hilton Hotel in Portland.
 The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission approved it late last week, and only state authorization is needed before a local group can begin a drive to sell three million dollars worth of 25-year sinking fund debentures.
 This money would be used to match a mortgage and funds to be put up by the Hilton firm. The civic fund campaign will be headed by Roy Vernstrom, a Pacific Power & Light Co. executive.
 The Equitable Life Insurance Co. already has committed a five million dollar construction loan to the project. A two million dollar promissory note is included in an agreement with Hilton for the rest of the financing.
 Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Plans for the 17-story, 500-room hotel have been drawn. It would be built at SW 8th Ave. and Broadway in downtown Portland.

Pickets Blast Red Regime

NEW YORK (AP)—Hungarian pickets marched noisily around the Soviet headquarters at the United Nations yesterday, shouting intermittently "Drop dead, Khrushchev," "Red murders" and "We love Hungary."
 New York City police, mindful of a recent violent demonstration by Hungarians outside the offices, took extra precautions.
 There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

There were about 250 marchers and 147 uniformed policemen and 35 detectives around the Manhattan building. Other officers were in reserve a few blocks away.
 The leader of the latest demonstration, the Rev. Imre Kovacs, pastor of the First Hungarian Reformed Church in Manhattan, asked the pickets to return every day this week through Saturday.
 "We should have 10,000 American boys and girls marching with us," he said.
 The pickets say they are trying to annoy the Soviets out of the United Nations.
 They carried signs reading "Now it is your turn to get out," "Stop butchering Hungarian patriots" and "Khrushchev is Soviet crime minister."
 The demonstration, like other similar protests recently in various world capitals, was in attention to the execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and other leaders of the 1956 Hungarian rebellion.

Girl Dead; Foster Folks Face Charge

PATERSON, N.J. (AP)—Blonde, blue-eyed Ellen Graham was only an infant when her natural parents were found guilty of neglect and she became a ward of the state.
 Two years ago, Ellen got a new pair of parents.
 Today, the foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Corbo, face arraignment on charges of beating her to death.
 The 3-year-old girl was found dead in her crib of a brain hemorrhage Friday morning, her little body covered with bruises.
 Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police said three of her brothers and a sister, all wards of the Corbos since 1956, were found suffering from malnutrition.
 They said the two Corbo children were found in good shape.
 Corbo, 40, was charged with murder soon afterwards, while his wife was taken to the Hope Dell County Hospital over the weekend for examination. The hospital's report has not been released, but a police official said the woman was found fit to be questioned.
 Officers quizzed her yesterday and booked her on the murder charge after she allegedly admitted striking Ellen with a leather strap.
 Meanwhile, Lloyd B. Westcott, head of the State Department of Institutions and Agencies, called for a full investigation "to determine whether there has been negligence on the part of the field supervisors."
 Police said the couple told them they had struck the child in recent weeks because she had refused to eat or go to bed on time. The Corbos also said the child had fallen twice, once down the cellar stairs and once from a chair.
 While she admitted using the strap, Mrs. Corbo, 30, denied hitting the girl with a wooden stick, police said.
 The stick, a 15-inch bat three quarters of an inch by two inches wide, had a carved handle and was kept hung up in the Corbo home with a rope attached to one end, they said.

Police Break Up Fighting

INDEPENDENCE, Ore. (AP)—A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles north of here and in front of a local drugstore.
 Sheriff Tony Neufeldt called in state police to stand by and help control the situation. A crowd of adults milled around the downtown area, but did not participate in the fights.

A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles north of here and in front of a local drugstore.
 Sheriff Tony Neufeldt called in state police to stand by and help control the situation. A crowd of adults milled around the downtown area, but did not participate in the fights.

A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles north of here and in front of a local drugstore.
 Sheriff Tony Neufeldt called in state police to stand by and help control the situation. A crowd of adults milled around the downtown area, but did not participate in the fights.

A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles north of here and in front of a local drugstore.
 Sheriff Tony Neufeldt called in state police to stand by and help control the situation. A crowd of adults milled around the downtown area, but did not participate in the fights.

A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles north of here and in front of a local drugstore.
 Sheriff Tony Neufeldt called in state police to stand by and help control the situation. A crowd of adults milled around the downtown area, but did not participate in the fights.

A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles north of here and in front of a local drugstore.
 Sheriff Tony Neufeldt called in state police to stand by and help control the situation. A crowd of adults milled around the downtown area, but did not participate in the fights.

A potentially serious outbreak of violence was averted by police here Sunday night as they broke up a series of fights involving Mexican farm laborers and local youths.
 Police seized a variety of weapons, including knives, haying hooks and bicycle chains, and sent a number of youngsters to their homes. No one was arrested.
 At least three separate fights broke out, one at a swimming area near the downtown district. Other incidents occurred at a ranch two miles