B. Goldfine Plea Weighed

WASHINGTON (AP) — House investigators headed into closed session Tuesday to weigh a plea by Bernard Goldfine to take his fight against some subcommittee questions into court right away.

Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark) made plain he held no sympathy for Goldfine's surprise request, but he ordered a 2 p.m. (EST) closed session of his investigating subcommittee to hear Goldfine and his lawyers argue the matter.

He congressmen have threatened to cite Goldfine for contempt for not answering questions.

Harris rescheduled open hearings for Wednesday after these developments.

Goldfine said he had made several visits to the White House and on one occasion had been introduced to President Eisenhower.

Rep. Peter F. Mack (D-Ill.) after questioning Goldfine about a now-famous May 10, 1953, hotel room meeting here where Goldfine, Adams, and John Fox were present, said it looks as if "much credence" should be added to the statements of Fox, a principal accuser of Goldfine.

Goldfine, who on Saturday had accused the congressmen of "sneer, pry and spy," said he was not disappointed at the progress of the hearings.

Rep. John Bell Williams (D-Miss) took note of the hearings' main theme — that Goldfine got federal favors in return for expensive hospitality to presidential aide Sherman Adams. Both Goldfine and Adams hotly dispute this.

Williams said it is "very significant" that Goldfine so far has not shown that he paid any hotel bills for Adams before the former New Hampshire governor came to Washington with Eisenhower in 1953, whereas the investigators have found more than $3,000 worth of hotel bills Goldfine picked up for Adams since then.

This raises the question, Williams said, "whether this is the personal friendship that Mr. Goldfine has made it out to be."

The current committee battle with Goldfine swirls around $77,000 worth of long-unpaid checks which Goldfine insists have nothing to do with the alleged committee inquiry into how regulatory agencies carry out the law.

Chairman Howard W. Smith (D-Va) of the Rules Committee, which cleared the measure a month ago by a 6-5 vote, contends the bill means exactly what it says.

"No act of Congress shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress to occupy the field in which such act operates, to the exclusion of all state laws on the same subject matter, unless such act contains an express provision to that effect, or unless there is a direct and positive conflict between such act and a state law so that the two cannot be reconciled or consistently stand together."

Smith introduced the bill in state addition laws effective. He acted after the Supreme Court ruled that a federal antiseptic law preempted that field and rendered a Pennsylvania law on that subject invalid.

But some opponents read into the bill an attempt by Southern Democrats to try to invalidate the federal civil rights law through state laws on the same subject.

They said opposition from the Justice and Labor departments gives a good indication that the President would veto the bill if it reached him.

Lambert was arrested Friday by state police. He is accused of stealing a total of eight white-faced heifers from rancher J. C. Miller on June 8 and June 20.

School Districts Attacked By Local Property Owner

By JAMES PHILLIPS A substantial Klamath Falls property owner has come out with a blistering attack on both this city's high school and elementary school districts.

Walter P. Hannon, in a scolding letter read to both boards at their meeting last night, labeled school cost increases here "startling" since 1951, when considered against the number of pupils in the districts.

He said the cost increases "compare unfavorably with school costs in other cities of Oregon."

Hannon, an attorney and Medford businessman formerly of this city, commented in his letter "there is something radically wrong with the administration of your joint districts."

He called for changing the alleged situation which is "making taxpayers see red, when we are sweating under an intolerable tax rate in Klamath Falls in the face of declining business."

"We trust that the present boards will do away forever with the little closely knit group which has heretofore had a stranglehold on our city schools, which accounts in part for the way school costs in Klamath Falls are so far out of line."

Hannon next called directors attention to a suit now being appealed in the State Supreme Court. The action pertains to purchase of land for a new school from a high school instructor. It was termed legal by a local court, but Hannon appealed to the supreme body.

Hannon remarked that at the time the suit came up, it was pointed out "that some directors, while serving as directors, were doing business with the joint districts. In one instance, a director was selling fuel oil to the high school. Another director was doing considerable business with the city schools through his millwork and supply company."

Hannon said he did not want to imply that either of these people were in any way dishonest, but that "such practices are clearly illegal."

He next points out that one of these ex-directors is now chairman of the joint budget committee which had a hand in preparing the 1953-54 budget.

Hannon asks that the chairman (Ed Robinson) resign as it is "repugnant to all rules of sound morality and civic honesty for a board member or budget board member to have a pecuniary interest in the taxes levied."

School officials admitted Robinson at various times has sold lumber items such as seats and desks, or parts of seats and desks, to the districts.

Both school boards agreed that they will have Clerk Harold Ashley reply to Hannon, inviting him to attend any of their meetings.

School authorities pointed out that all their records and transactions are open to inspection by Hannon or anyone else at any time.

In closing, Hannon asks both boards to notify him within 20 days whether his request for the budget chairman's resignation will be complied with.

It is not known if he plans court action at this time.

Superintendent Gary Robertson made a two-day tour of the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. He would learn the academy's prerequisite requirements and be able to get advice prospective cadets at KUHHS. The tour will be in September. Final action on the invitation is expected at the next meeting.

Member George Filtratt motioned for the discontinuance and the only "no" vote cast was that of Mrs. Earl Sheridan.

Council Okays Two-Mill Levy Measure For Ballot

Voters of Klamath Falls will be asked to cast their ballots in November on a request for an additional two mill levy for park and recreation purposes.

The city council at its regular meeting last night formally approved placing the measure on the November ballot. The request was initiated by the Park and Recreation Commission at its meeting last week.

At present, each department operates on a two mill levy which amounts to approximately $27,000. The new request, if approved by the voters, would add another $27,000 to the budgets of the two departments.

Under the recently adopted city manager plan, the two departments will be consolidated into one when a city manager is hired.

The council heard objections to a paving plan for North Second Street from McKinley to Roosevelt. A number of residents of the area who are being assessed for the project appeared to inquire of differences in assessment costs, and at one point, Jack Benner, 769 California Street asked why the city couldn't make a deal with the county to pave city streets.

Mayor Lawrence Slater pointed to Benner and the group that the county would not pave city streets. He also pointedly informed the group that there has been only one paving contractor in the city and that it was his understanding that a strike was pending which might make paving costs even higher in the future.

Cliff Sanders, assistant city engineer, pointed out to the group that under the Bancroft bonding plan it is necessary to assess approximately one half block each direction from an improvement project, and that on this particular paving project that half block distance was somewhat flexible.

After a lengthy discussion, the council voted to proceed with the project when only two of the 18 property owners being assessed for the project lodged a protest.

KF Lawyer Must Be Given Nomination Certificate The state attorney general has ruled that Robert G. Danielson, now a Klamath Falls attorney, must be issued a certificate of nomination for district judge of Jackson County.

Danielson, a former Ashland resident, ran for the office in the primary election May 16 and beat the only other candidate for the office, E. Roy Bashaw.

For all practical purposes, this meant Danielson was elected since only his name would appear on the November ballot, unless there were write-in candidates. Incumbent Judge James Main did not file for reelection.

However, Danielson took a job in the Klamath County district attorney's office on April 1 and this was not a resident of Jackson County on election day, May 16.

Jackson County District Attorney Tom Reeder advised the county clerk that because of his non-resident status, Danielson was not entitled to a nomination certificate, without which his name cannot go on the November ballot.

Reeder then asked State Attorney General Robert Y. Thornton for his opinion, which was released this week in favor of Danielson.

Meanwhile, the situation grew more tangled with the filing of a suit in Medford Friday by one Richard J. House. The suit seeks to eliminate Danielson on nonresident grounds and install his erstwhile opponent Bashaw as the successful candidate on the November ballot.

A hearing on the suit is expected in circuit court in Medford within some two weeks. The judge will then decide whose name will go before voters in November. Danielson said today, if the ruling is in his favor, and if he is not beaten by a write-in candidate in November, he would assume the Jackson County district judgeship January 1.

The lawyer said he moved his family back to Medford July 5 and that Medford is now his official residence, even though he continues to practice law here in association with Attorney Glenn Ramirez. He resigned from the district attorney's office May 15.
