4 KF Women Attend Meet

Four Klamath Falls women were present for the 14th Biennial Convention of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs Inc., held in Seattle, July 6-11 inclusive. Mrs. Blanche Petroff and Mrs. Kathleen Ward represented the Klamath Falls club as delegates. Mrs. Isabelle Brixner and Betty O'Leary were visitors.

Approximately 3,500 women were present for the business sessions held in the Seattle Civic Auditorium. All 49 states, including the newest, Alaska, plus Hawaii and Puerto Rico were represented.

Important legislation during the meeting included the passing of the measure to hold national annual conventions and to discontinue the practice of holding regional and biennial conventions, as in the past. This new ruling will become effective in 1960. Philadelphia was chosen as host city for the national convention that year.

The recommendation that all BPW clubs, on both local and national levels, work together to introduce legislation requiring uniformity of traffic signals and highways signs throughout the United States, was unanimously endorsed by the delegates.

High School Bid Approved

YREKA—The State Department of Finance aproved the low bid of the A. J. McMurry Construction Company in the amount of $587,646 for the construction of the new Weed High School, Dr. Jere E. Hurley, district superintendent, said recently.

Construction on the Weed school started Monday, July 14, as the contract papers and the bond have already been filed, Dr. Hurley also said. The contractors have one year to complete the school.

The Weed High School is the fifth and last of the district's state aided building projects to get underway. The Yreka and Butte Valley high school projects are nearing completion and will be ready for the ensuing year. The new McCloud High School has been under construction for the past two months and rapid progress is being made on this building.

The new Mount Shasta High School got underway a few weeks ago and most of the excavation and foundation has been completed, as well as 35 per cent of the classroom walls.

In addition to the above stated aided projects, the district built entirely from its own funds a gymnasium and three-classroom unit for the Happy Camp High School, which was occupied at the beginning of the school year, and a new eight-room unit for the Tulelake High School which was occupied for the school year 1956-57.

4-H'ers Plan Steer Exhibit

TULELAKE—Sixteen big Hereford Angus steers were transported to the Tulelake Fairgrounds, Thursday, July 10, so that their 4-H owners could learn to prepare them for showing.

Thirty five 4-H members, leaders and parents participated in grooming and showing the steers.

Junior leader Jim Roberts demonstrated how to fit a Hereford steer for showing, while Kay Parsons performed similarly with an Angus steer.

During the afternoon, Modoc County farm adviser, Bob Savage, assisted by the livestock leaders from the Basin 4-H clubs, put the 4-H members through their paces in showmanship training.

This training was given the Tulelake boys and girls to aid them in preparations for the Tulelake Fair September 6 to 8.

The animals used in the training will be shown at the fair. Those grading choice and prime will be sold fo the highest bidder at the Junior Livestock Auction, another feature of the fair.

TIRED OF SACK LOOK

SAN FRANCISCO — Eleanor Moses, Miss Alaska in the Miss Universe contest to be held at Long Beach, says she doesn't go for the sack look.

The 20-year-old Athabaskan Indian from Fairbanks, who paused here long enough to buy a kimono, explained: "My people have been wearing sack dresses for generations. The kimono is prettier."

American Fashion Expert Blasts Paris Designers

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Let's have American-designed clothes for the American woman and a laissez-faire policy toward any Frenchman who conceals curves, says designer Oleg Cassini.

Cassini takes several digs at Parisian designers and those in the United States who copy any of their "ridiculous" fashions. He is opposed to any design which obliterates "feminine allure by camouflaging it under the guise of a balloon," a reference to one popular silhouette from abroad.

"Anything that takes away from the contours of the body must be condemned as a short-lived fad," said the designer in a recorded talk for use with the opening of his Fall collection. Cassini is one of 30 designer members of the couture group of the New York dress institute previewing new fashions for visiting reporters this week.

"I feel there is as much talent here as abroad," said Cassini, whose own special knack is in clothes with both elegance and earthy appeal.

"Very few French designers can design for their own trade so they are trying to impress the American market," he added.

"What I didn't like about the French designs was: the body of the woman was not in evidence, and styles were inspired by time past . . .like copying the design of an old car when a new car is being created . . ."

Many of Cassini's daytime dresses follow the general trend to a the body to the hem. He introduced the "Angelique" silhouette in daytime costumes — a jacket flared like a cutaway, topping a simple dress. The designer likes opulence of fabric for evening — turquoise lace over jewelled satin, for instance. Or black chiffon over a flower-patterned black and white organza, and black chantilly lace over nude crepe.

Jane Derby is another designer with a mind of her own. She produces conservative, highly wearable clothes and for daytime this season stresses the everything-goes-together look. Her suits come with coordinated over-blouse or dress top. Typical is one in Navy imported wool, with blue patterned challis overblouse and the same challis lining for the soft jacket.

Highlights of other collections shown Thursday:

George Carmel — Suit jackets are short, worn with slim skirts; many of the suits have belts placed high to accent the empire waist.

Ben Reig — A whole bevy of sheath-like evening gowns, one of wool mesh and an overall scroll embroidery of gold and jewelling. Reig also featured plaid for formal wear — a long evening coat of plaid wool topping a white satin sheath.

Maurice Rentner — Plenty of back interest in suits and dresses. Suit jackets have panel backs, a fitted front and loose back, or the blouson cut. One of the outstanding skirt silhouettes is the castanet, with the fabric cut to cup inward at the hemline, and give the body an oval shape from the waistline down.

Three Fires Hit Klamath District

Of the 17 fires reported Wednesday in the Rogue River National Forest, three fell within the Klamath District of the U.S. Forest Service, officials reported Thursday.

The three fires were all caused by lightning; two were on Cherry Peak and one at the head of Three-Mile Creek. The latter fire was handled by four smoke jumpers who were parachuted into the inaccessible area Wednesday morning at dawn. All three fires were reported out Thursday morning.

The Forest Service reports that the fire situation was critical before the coming of rain Wednesday. (Approximately half an inch fell at Lake of the Woods Wednesday night and Thursday morning).

In the northern part of the Klamath District no rain has fallen recently, and Forest Service officials ask anyone building an open fire to use extreme caution, especially in this area.

COMPLAINER'S CAR TAGGED

CHICAGO (UPI) — Alderman Charles H. Weber's face is slightly red today.

After he had complained to police that private vehicles on Damen Avenue were hampering the work of street cleaners, officers began ticketing all illegally parked autos in the area. Among the cars tagged was Weber's big white Cadillac.

POSSIBLE RATIONING

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI)— The Argentine government is considering the imposition of gas rationing as the result of the Middle East crisis, it was reported today.

The bulk of Argentine oil imports come from the Middle East.

KEEPS POPPING UP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The name of Bernard Goldfine popped up in the Senate debate Thursday on the reciprocal trade program.

Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D-S.C.), arguing against extension of what he called the "reciprocal trade give-away," claimed the program clothes the President with the "legal right to out-give Goldfine."
