Crippled Boy Crash Victim

BORDENTOWN, N. J. (AP) - Everybody knew little Eddie O'Neil Rodgers, the crippled kid who thumped about on crutches swinging his braced legs before him.

He'd been shining shoes since he was able, a little hunchbacked 13-year-old hopping here and there in search of customers.

Hurrying, hurrying on his tortured way, he would raise his thumb for rides.

"I guess Eddie used to cover 20 square miles," said State Trooper Joseph Rogalski. "We knew he loved to hitchhike, but we sort of—you might say—didn't molest him."

Eddie hitched a ride last night with Airman John W. Souders Jr. of Philadelphia. Eddie was a favorite of servicemen at nearby Ft. Dix and McGuire Air Force base.

At Hedding, Souders car spun out of control and off the side of the road. A utility pole sheared off the top. The two were pitched out.

Rodgers was in serious condition at Ft. Dix Hospital.

Beside him lay his splintered crutches.

Search Party Seeking Tots

ORR, Minn. (AP) - "We've got to find them today or there probably won't be much use looking any more."

This alert was sounded today by Ray McDermott as he appealed for volunteers in the search for Francine Crego, 10, and her brother Michael, 8, missing since they went out to pick blueberries in this remote northern wilderness area at midday Wednesday.

McDermott, chief St. Louis County deputy sheriff, directed the appeal for help to Hibbing, home of the missing children 60 miles south of here. He said other volunteers were expected from International Falls, on the Canadian border 40 miles to the north. Ground searchers aided by two planes an Air Force helicopter found no trace of the children in a daylong survey of the roadless and tangled brush and bog country yesterday.

The children were staying at their grandfather's remote Ash Lake cabin while their father Lyle Crego Jr. was here to help with some family logging.

ACE TV TIPS

Your eyes, unlike your ears, are critically trained and will notice any defective picture presentation on your TV screen. A recent Philco survey showed that customers are as skilled as most TV technicians in properly adjusting their sets to please their eyes.

If your picture seems a bit out of shape, too dark or a bit shaky, don't be afraid to turn the controls in back of the set that have regular tuning shafts or knobs. The one marked "AGC" can do wonders to take the shake and shimmy out of your picture. The ones marked "Vert. Lin." and "Height" can make the head and feet go back to proportion. Take your time, be careful, and you'll find it's simple.

NO we can't say we've been here the last 25 YEARS, but being of a forward and progressive nature, we can say we WILL BE HERE in business for the next 40 YEARS. We like Klamath Falls!

The two partners that make up ACE-TV only had Uncle Sam for an address the last 21 years, both having served that long in the U.S. Navy as Radar and Fire-Control technicians. We would have loved being in the T-V business instead of in the Navy during the two wars. ONE thing nice tho, we didn't develop any under-the-counter attitudes during those fat post-war years.

Our modern building was built from the ground up as a TV and Radio service-sales shop. Come in, we service all electronic equipment, and sell quality Zenith T-V, Radio and Phono sets.

Tribal Committee Calls For Termination Repeal

By JAMES PHILLIPS

The Klamath Tribal Executive Committee, a 10-member body elected by tribe members, has approved a resolution calling for repeal of the termination act in its entirety.

On June 28, the committee sought to have tribal members approve a resolution for repeal of only Section 5 of the law—the section covering sale of tribal assets for purposes of paying off members who voted to withdraw from the tribe.

However, a quorum was not obtained and voting did not take place.

Now the executive committee has officially passed on its own a new resolution asking repeal of the whole termination law, passed by Congress in 1954.

The group said the law is "detrimental" and not "in the best interests of the Klamath Tribe, Klamath Basin and state of Oregon."

The resolution also notes that the U.S. Constitution requires "just compensation" for those yielding property for public use. The committee feels that under present law, "just compensation" to tribe members withdrawing could not be achieved, due to "fire sale" prices for assets (timber and land) to be sold.

The resolution mentions, too, the objectionable feature of the present act that does not require private timber purchasers to cut on a sustained yield basis.

It asks that the "future destiny" of the tribe be decided only after full consultations and consent of members.

Copies of the resolution have been sent to all this area's congressional representatives, to the Indian affairs committees in Congress, Interior Department officials and to many other groups and individuals having a hand in termination.

If the act were repealed, a multitude of plans for winding up U.S. stewardship of the reservation would be halted.

Among these would be sale after August 13, 1958, of timber and land to pay off the 77 per cent of the tribe which voted to withdraw last April. The tribe also would remain intact since the election would be nullified. A trusteeship to administer remaining assets for remaining members would also be nullified.

Repeal would mean, too, that deeds to privately owned Indian homesteads would not be transferred to owners as is now scheduled for after August 13.

Present plans to turn over reservation roads to the county would be halted as well as plans for an Indian education program after termination and various other implementations set forth in the measure.

An amendment already passed by the Senate calls for, among other things, (1) private buyers to guarantee cutting on a sustained yield basis; (2) federal purchase of tribal assets not sold by January 1, 1961; and (3) "fair market" value return to Indians withdrawing from the tribe.

Since the Senate okayed this measure, a House of Representatives Indian subcommittee has okayed a different version. It also calls for a "reappraisal" of tribal assets, but does not call for private purchasers to guarantee sustained yield operations.

Instead, it calls for buyers to operate so far as "practicable" to "furnish a continuous supply of timber," in accordance with a plan they would submit to the interior secretary for his approval.

The proposal has yet to clear the whole House.

lengthy termination act, known as Public Law 387.

The committee's action in passing the resolution means it would not consider adequate enactment of an amendment now being considered in Congress calling for certain changes in the original termination law.

State Law Action Lags

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate appeared unlikely today to act on a House-passed bill to protect state laws which parallel federal enactments.

This was the outlook despite strong support of the legislation by Sen. James O. Eastland (D. Miss.), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and a sponsor of a companion Senate bill.

The House passed the bill 241-155.

Eastland declined to predict its prospects in the Senate.

The House measure provides that federal laws shall not nullify state laws on the same subject unless there is a direct and irreconcilable conflict between them or unless acts passed by Congress expressly say so.

The bill had its origin in a Supreme Court decision overturning the state court conviction of Steve Nelson, a Pennsylvania Communist leader.

The court ruled that Congress, by passing the Smith Act and other anti-Communist legislation, had pre-empted the field of prosecuting seditious cases. The effect was to invalidate all state seditious laws and indirectly to lay open to question state laws in other fields in which Congress has acted.

Opponents protested that the bill would offer an open invitation to state legislatures to enact laws removing the teeth from federal statutes dealing with civil rights, labor, railroads and agriculture.

Both the Justice and the Labor departments have opposed it.

But supporters of the bill, ignoring predictions that it would be vetoed by President Eisenhower, argued it was necessary to prevent the Supreme Court from invalidating state laws contrary to the intent of Congress.

Man Fined For Cruelty To Birds

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Stanley Frank Pearson, fined $25 yesterday for cruelty to sparrows, contends he really likes birds.

Three witnesses testified that Pearson lured sparrows with grain into a wire contraption in his backyard and then kept the birds locked in his garage without water.

Pearson, 34, said he periodically took the sparrows to the country and released them.

He told the judge he merely tried to discourage the sparrows. He said the little brown birds kept more colorful wildlife such as bluejays and cardinals away from his yard.
