

FRIENDSHIP QUILT

Siskiyou Museum Receives Gift Of Friendship Quilt

YREKA — An old "Friendship" quilt, vintage 1906, was recently presented to the Siskiyou County Museum by N. Errol Beaughan of Dunsmuir. It is now on display at the museum.

In those early days of 1906, the Yreka Ladies Aid, in an effort to raise church funds, hit upon the unique idea of making a friendship quilt. When completed it was raffled off and won by the aunt of the donor, Mrs. Minnie Derbitt.

The quilt has 25 red and white blocks, each block containing 20 names. Each member of the ladies aid society was given a block, and her task was to secure 20 signatures at ten cents per signature, which were embroidered in red.

The signatures include many of the early pioneer families who came to Siskiyou County and settled in the 1850's. Many of the descendants are living and have families throughout the county.

One block of particular interest bears the signature of Dr. A. J. Collar, and instead of writing his last name, a collar was drawn. Of similar nature, J. W. Bird indicated his last name with the drawn figure of a bird.

Among some of the family names appearing on the quilt are the Henry Schultz family, George Butler family, Wetzel family, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bowen, W. A. Hovey family, Alden J. Steele, Mrs. L. E. Steele, Dr. W. W. Barham, Eddy family, Liddke family, J. B. Russell, and many others. The ladies aid block, which is placed in the center, bears the names of Carrie L. Tebbe, Lena Authenreit, Jennie Mathews, Laura Sweet, Alice H. Sarter, Clara M. Russell, Inez Mullen, Jennie Hovey, Nancy Collar, Elizabeth Barrett, Hattie Wright, Jennie O'Neil, Alice De-

Fort Klamath Slates Bazaar

FORT KLAMATH — The annual bazaar and dinner sponsored by the Civic Improvement Club will be held Saturday, August 2, in the C. I. Clubhouse. Serving of dinner and opening of booths and attractions will start simultaneously at 5:30 p.m.

The year's menu will offer a choice of roast turkey with dressing or roast beef with all the usual accompaniments of a country style dinner. Chairman of this committee is Mrs. Wilbur B. Heseck who will be assisted on the kitchen detail by Mrs. Blaine Brattain, Mrs. Ben Corona, Mrs. Bert Stanley and Mrs. Jim Knight.

Dining room decor, table and seating arrangements and serving will be in charge of Mrs. Jack Thomas with a working committee of Mrs. Dan Brown, Mrs. Mike Beaulieu, Mrs. Bill Nicholson, Mrs. Duane F. Wood, Mrs. Gail Culver and Darla Brewer. Coffee will be brewed and served by Mrs. Alfred Feezer.

The pastry table will be in charge of Mrs. Gale M. Wood and Mrs. Ober Brown; Mrs. Elmore Nicholson will manage the details of hot rolls, butter, relishes and salads. On hand to greet and seat patrons in the dining room will be the evening's hostess, Mrs. Earl M. Jackson.

A charge of $1.50 per plate for adults and 75 cents for children under 12 will be made for the dinner with Mrs. Geneva Brattain at the door as cashier.

Mrs. JoAnna Taylor and Mrs. William Brewer will have an apron and fancywork booth, at which various handmade pillow cases and novelties will be offered for sale in addition to a wide selection of handmade aprons. Mrs. William A. Page and Mrs. Norman Van Iderstine will manage a booth with homemade candy and will operate a parcel post feature in connection with their booth; Mrs. Elizabeth M. Loosley and Mrs. Allen Summers will auction miscellaneous donated articles, and a fish pond for youngsters will be run by Barbara Nicholson and Judy Culver.

Proceeds will go toward defraying heavy expenses of labor and material incurred this past year when extensive improvements were made to the clubhouse, including remodeling the interior and refinishing the entire exterior of the building with asbestos shingles.

Witt, Katherine Rammers, Frances C. Butler, Jean Orr, Olive Eddy, Ilva Gates, Mary B. Davis and Eva A. Gleason, all members of the society.

Surprisingly, the colors of the quilt seem as bright and vivid as they were 52 years ago. Staff members of the museum were captivated when they were presented with the quilt.

Warner Rites Held Sunday

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Last rites were conducted Sunday for Harry Warner, who with his brothers opened a theater in New Castle, Pa., in 1903, and built Warner Bros. Studio, a movie-making giant.

Mourners, estimated at numbering about 1,000, including top film figures, overflowed the Wilshire Boulevard Temple for the services conducted by Rabbi Magnin.

The movie pioneer, who died of a cerebral occlusion last Friday night at his home, died during a year that saw the deaths of film pioneers Louis B. Mayer, Harry Cohn, Jesse Lasky and Don Hartman.

Warner and his brothers, Jack and Albert, were credited with backing the picture, "The Jazz Singer," the first Hollywood sound picture. It was shot in 1926.

Rabbi Magnin eulogized the 76-year-old Warner as a "plain, simple man who loved above all else being a farmer."

"He will be remembered not only as a cinema pioneer, but because he was Harry Warner as a human being, a good Jew, a good American and a dear, sweet person," the rabbi said.

Dublin based his statement Sunday on estimates by actuaries in government and life insurance businesses. However, he said the rate at which the average life span has lengthened is slowing down.

Since 1900, according to Dublin the conquest of diseases which primarily affect the young has added 22 years onto the average life expectancy, bringing it to 70 years.

He said the problem now is to find ways to control diseases which mostly affect older persons. "Although people will live longer, man's life span will not change materially in the future," he said. "Nature has apparently decreed that man, at the most, can live to 110 years, even with much improved health conditions."

SKYLINE BALANCE

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Coach Jack Gardner of the University of Utah says he expects the Skyline Conference basketball conference will be more balanced next season. Wyoming, the league champion, stumbled in its final two games yet finished a game ahead of the pack. "I've never seen a year in which every school had so many young players," Gardner says.

Beauties Give Newsman Interviews Rebel Eye To Jobs Chief In Storied Backdrop

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Beauties in the 7th annual Miss Universe Pageant turned their attention to Hollywood, television and Las Vegas gambling resorts today.

Not all of the 79 contestants in the pageant had landed jobs by the time the hall was over Saturday night but several had offers in show business by today. Not all wanted jobs.

Lovely Luz Marina Zuloaga, 19, the Columbia beauty chosen as Miss Universe, began her grooming at Max Factor's in Hollywood in preparation for a year's tour.

Miss Zuloaga collected $11,000 in cash, a new convertible car and her expenses for a year in winning the beauty pageant.

Eurlyne Howell, the sweetly drawing 16-year-old Southern belle, chosen as Miss United States had been asked to make a screen test at 20th Century-Fox and Columbia Studio.

Fox was reported to be considering Miss Howell, a tall, blonde Grace Kelly type from Bossier, La., for a part in "Mardi Gras," starring singer Pat Boone.

Screen tests were being prepared for a dozen other contestants. The Moulin Rouge, a night spot in Hollywood, planned auditions for contestants who want to try for spots in a new show to be in Las Vegas announced that premiered in October.

Resort hotels such as the Dunes beauties had been asked to appear there.

MOUKHTARA, Lebanon (UPI) — Hollywood in its wildest flights never dreamed up a setting or a cast of characters like this rocky nest where lives Kamil Jumblatt, the chief of the Lebanese mountain rebels.

Here is a dilapidated sort of throne room of a great stone castle that would have suited King Arthur, I found a rather bored, elegant young man in a worsted suit of Ivy League cut and smelling of toilet water. He was surrounded by villainous and scruffy-looking followers who broke into gap-toothed grins at the first friendly overture.

The castle itself has 200 rooms, and long, steep flights of stairs and parapets which suddenly turn into corridors and ledges that fall to the rocks below.

I reached Jumblatt's castle after a two-hour taxi ride from Beirut, passing through at least a dozen bandit road posts with nothing more than my American passport and the garrulous amiability of my cab driver.

In the courtyard below the castle were several hundred rebels armed with rifles, belted and cartridge belts crossed over their shoulders.

Jumblatt is a leader of the Druze sect, an offshoot of the Islamic sect which the Savior is yet to come and that he will be born of man.

I was led up three long flights of stone steps and taken into a large room with straight-backed armchairs.

Jumblatt walked into the room followed by a strange array of men, some in uniform, some in Western style suits, but most in native dress.

Jumblatt shook hands and motioned me to a seat on his left. The others sat around the room, then one by one came forward to speak in Arabic.

Jumblatt was holding court. After 15 minutes Jumblatt turned to me.

He is an ascetic type who speaks accented but good English. He once taught at the Sorbonne in Paris.

I asked him what message he had for the American people. He said first the Marines should go. Perhaps they were, as President Eisenhower said, helping preserve Lebanon's independence and integrity, he said. But the country must work out its own internal affairs, he said.

Jumblatt said they did not want to fight the Americans but would do so if the Marines came up into the mountains.

We talked for 20 minutes. Then I rose to go. Jumblatt shook my hand limply.

All the men sitting around the wall stood up and returned my farewell wave.

The rebels, Jumblatt said, did not want Lebanon in Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic camp nor in Russia's, but they also did not want it occupied by American troops.

I asked if his men would fight the Americans.
