Unexpected Normal In TV Shows

NEW YORK (UPI)—Proponents of the daytime quiz show fad often use the argument, "Well, they're live and you never know what'll happen."

Of course, not all viewers of these shows look for the unexpected. There is evidence that a few of them are more interested in getting their hands on the loot under the popular "home viewer entry" plan.

Nevertheless, the unexpected does sometimes happen on these daytime quizzes to give them some added zip.

On a recent "For Love or Money" program, a pretty young lady contestant had to choose between accepting a sum of money or a non-monetary prize. The problem was that she didn't know what the prize was and she didn't know how much money she could have. While she was trying to decide, her husband darted to the stage from his seat in the audience and whispered advice to her ear.

"He told me to take the money," she told emcee Bill Nimmo. "So I'll take the money."

The obedient wife was awarded the cash prize of three cents.

The item she turned down was a set of golf clubs. "And I was going to take the prize," she wailed.

On "Play Your Hunch," emcee Merv Griffin introduced a lady contestant to a man and suddenly felt a chill in the air. The contestants murmured politely to each other and looked away.

After the show, the man explained to Griffin that he and the woman had been married and separated 12 years ago. Hadn't seen each other since.

WITS DUET

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—A violinist got together with a pianist recently and they held a jam session that ranged from "Sweet Georgia Brown" to the classics. Then they went to work filming a TV show to be shown next fall with the violinist as host and the pianist his guest. The former is Jack Benny and the latter, Oscar Levant.
