Sevareid Hits Quality Of TV

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—The hunting season has opened early this year. Joining us happy huntsmen is a good friend and noted journalist, Eric Sevareid of CBS, who blasted both barrels at television critics in a recent issue of The Reporter magazine.

"Television," he wrote, "could do with a sharp drop in the quantity of criticism and a sharp rise in its quality. How many writers who haven't read a play since Booth Tarkington's 'Seventeen' are posing as critics of TV drama? How many lady journalists who never covered the city council are telling TV news departments how they should cover the national conventions?"

Well, I don't know how many. If Sevareid would tell me how many and who they are, I might go along with him.

Sevareid's proposed solution:

Let the newspaper's drama editor review TV dramas, the church editor religious shows and the science editor science shows.

One trouble is that he never defines the nature of criticism and the role of a critic in television, a medium that is not exactly like anything preceding it. A critic in any field develops slowly by study, exposure and osmosis. He studies the techniques and analyzes the effects of the medium he's criticizing.

An able drama critic does not make an able TV drama critic, unless he studies and watches television, because TV techniques are quite different from those of the legitimate theater.

A very good church page editor, who knows his field thoroughly, could be a very inept reviewer of TV religious programs unless he has spent a while studying the best ways the small screen can provoke thought and evoke emotion.

As for the science editor, let me get personal. I nearly flunked high school physics, but I found Sevareid's science program last season lucid and stimulating for the scientific idiots like myself whom he was addressing.

If, however, Sevareid is right about all this, he has only one logical course left. On his next broadcast he must share his time with a dozen experts in the dozen news fields in which he actually is most expert himself.

There Are No Investment Clubs In Soviet Union

NEW YORK (UPI) — Here's something you can't do in Soyuz Sovetskikh Sotsialisticheskikh Respublik.

You can't join an investment club—no stocks, no stock exchange, and no spare cash to buy stocks even if they were there.

That unpronounceable name above, needless to explain, translates to the Union of Soviet Republics, a big place full of poor people who theoretically own the means of production, distribution, and exchange—but don't.

Over here in the U.S.A. more and more people are becoming real capitalists—owning stock of plants that make steel, autos, refrigerators, electrical appliances of all kinds, etc.—and they own some of these things too.

Many of them are members of one of the 12,000 investment clubs which account for investment, mostly in common stocks, of some $2 million a month.

Wall Streeters regard these clubs very highly not only as a source of demand for the stock market but also because of the training in things financial that go along with them.

In many cases the clubs are being advised by New York Stock Exchange member firms.

There's the case of the ten middle aged ladies who belong to the Plaza Investment Club of Kansas City, Missouri. They listen to their broker's advice, but they've got to be shown.

They wanted to invest in stock of American Zinc, Lead I Smelting Co., so they travelled in a body to Oklahoma to the site of the company's lead mine. Right down the 300-foot shaft they went on a tour of inspection. They approved and the club invested in the company's stock.

Market men in the financial district's canyons here are doing some research on the Plaza Club.

The ladies, they find, formed their club with nothing more than a desire to put their small extra funds to work in an enterprising way. They limited the club to 14 because that was a number which could meet at the various homes conveniently.

Their brokerage firm drew up an agreement for them and outlined a plan of operations.

They studied state and local laws and agreed it would be wise to incorporate the club.

Meetings are held monthly at various homes of the members over potluck dinners. They study stocks, analyze company earnings reports and prospects and decide by a majority vote how to invest the $140 a month of their pooled resources of $10 each.

So far the club has bought stocks of seven different corporations, and has a tidy profit of ten per cent.

This is one of the smaller clubs of modest means. They run much larger.

For example, in Detroit, the home of the National Association of Investment Clubs, there is a big, prosperous one. It has invested a total of $26,000 plus $34,000 in reinvested earnings since 1941. Members of this club have withdrawn more than $22,000 and still the club has a portfolio of common stocks worth, at current prices, a total of $85,000.

Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange has a good word for investment clubs:

"Investment clubs offer a course in practical economics. They give small groups of friends and business associates the chance to pool their information and judgment and, with the help of member firms, to invest a modest amount of money."

Truckers Strike Forces SP To Declare An Embargo

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A strike-lockout of truckers in 11 western states forced the Southern Pacific Railroad today to declare an embargo on all shipments of less than carload lot.

The SP said its terminals were clogged and that it could no longer accept small shipments for delivery to or from points in Arizona, California, Nevada, New Mexico and Oregon.

However, the Santa Fe said it would accept all shipments for the time being.

Employers in the 11 states ordered the lockout early Monday in retaliation for a strike of 2,350 teamsters in Central California and Western Nevada.

As a result, the for-hire trucking industry began shutting down in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

By the end of the week, 1,600 trucking firms in the west will have parked 150,000 trucks. More than 100,000 men will be idled.

The railroad freight embargo, coupled with the trucking tie-up, was sure to cause commodity shortages, production cutbacks and higher unemployment.

No serious shortages were anticipated in the immediate future, but transportation experts said such shortages could develop in some areas if the strike-lockout lasts as long as 10 days.

The Western Conference of Teamsters announced it is preparing an unfair labor practice charge, a petition for an injunction and a federal court damage suit against the trucking associations.

A union attorney, Mathew Tobriner, said the lockout was illegal under a provision of the Taft-Hartley Act holding that an "employer cannot lock out employes it covered in past collective bargaining negotiations."

The employers claim that the 2,350 striking teamsters in Central California and Nevada were covered under a master agreement negotiated May 27 for teamsters in the Far West.

In letters to employer members, the trucking associations claimed the California-Nevada Teamsters repudiated the agreement by going on strike. The employers said they ordered the lockout on grounds that a strike against one is a strike against all.

But the teamsters said only long-haul drivers accepted the May 27 agreement and the 2,350 teamsters in Central California and Nevada turned it down.

What the 2,350 strikers want is wage parity with truckers in San Francisco Bay Area counties.

Meanwhile, teamsters idled by the lockout flocked to unemployment insurance offices to file claims for benefits. Whether they will receive them remains to be seen.

No negotiations were scheduled in the dispute. Federal mediators were standing by in case their services should be required.

Historians Slate Tour

Inquiries on the proposed historical tour to the Lava Beds National Monument, sponsored by the Klamath County Historical Society August 17, which will take those participating to some of the spots in the Klamath Basin where history was made many years ago, are coming in from the San Francisco Bay area.

Ken McLeod, president of the local historical society, will conduct the tour that will start at Merrill in front of the high school at 8 a.m. Oregon time, 9 a.m. (DST).

Members of the Modoc and Siskiyou County historical societies have been invited to travel with the Klamath County group.

The first stop will be at the old Stone Bridge, the 1846 Emigrant crossing over Lost River below Merrill. From there the party will travel to Bloody Point, site of the 1852 massacre when 11 persons lost their lives, eight from an emigrant train, and three Yreka citizens. One person escaped alive from the train.

A marker will be put up at this spot by the Klamath Historical Society. The next stop will be at the graves of two Warm Springs Indian Scouts killed during the Modoc Indian War. The petroglyphs, Captain Jack's Stronghold, Gillem's Camp, Canby Cross will be on the itinerary followed by lunch brought by those traveling in the caravan, to be served on the lawn at headquarters in the Lava Beds National Monument. There will be an informal discussion of historical interest during the lunch hour by McCloud.

4-H NEWS

By PAT McKINNON

MONTAGUE—Mrs. Marvin Miller and Barry Crutchfield were guest speakers at the Big Springs 4-H Club meeting Tuesday, August 5, in the Big Springs Community Hall.

Mrs. Miller's topic was on the career of nursing, while Crutchfield told about the inspection of the Big Springs Elementary School.

Various reports were given on the different events the club had participated in, both individually and as a group.

Also discussed by the club was the preparation needed in the way of equipment and feed for the 4-H cattle to be shown at the Siskiyou County Fair August 15, 16 and 17.

The group further discussed the 4-H booth that the club plans to enter in the fair.

CORVALLIS — A veteran 4-H Club leader from Lakeview has won a trip to the national 4-H Club Congress in Chicago in November, the Oregon State College Extension Service announced.

Mrs. Arthur E. Kaley qualified for the trip after winning a state sewing machine training contest and completing a training course for 4-H leaders.

Mrs. Kaley has been a clothing leader in 4-H work for 10 years. By leading three clubs, Stylish Stitchers, Slick Stitchers and Pins and Needles, she taught clothing techniques to 54 girls.

She also helped train 21 advanced clothing club members, and held weekly leader training classes in her home. For three years she has served as president of the Lake County 4-H Leaders Association.

HENLEY ROOTERS

The Henley Rooters held their 12th meeting at the home of Scott Skinner August 1. The meeting was called to order by Steve Schmeck, president. The fair was discussed in detail. Mr. Skinner explained the entry blanks and premium list. Julie Rhodes is to give a report on showmanship at the next meeting. Eleven members were present. The next meeting will be held at the home of Nancy Negrevski. Mrs. Skinner served refreshments.
