

Mouth Make-Up

The mouth that is strictly on its own this summer under a cover-up beach hat or face-caging veil has captivated Max Factor, who gives his full attention to the ins and outs of make-up for this independent little performer.

Some handy tips? Stop giving your lips a scant last-minute of your make-up time. Factor urges you to save the lion's share of your make-up minutes for this feature of the face that's going to put on the whole beauty show.

Start by removing every trace of color from your lips. Then, before you even reach for your lipstick, have lips completely lined with foundation make-up. If you're tan, wear a pastel lipstick shade. A pink 'n' orange will give you the full impact of either color. If you are fair-skinned, settle for the most brilliant clear, clear red in a color spectrum.

Learn to use your lipstick brush with finesse. Here's where art-work really pays off, says Factor, who reminds the user of a sable tip that upon its sure-handed strokes depend a curvier lipline and a younger-looking mouth.

For a more voluptuous lipline (it's fashion's compensation for summer's severe little dress), carry your lipstick brush all the way out to the corners. After practicing a bit with your brush, dare to extend the upper lipline beyond the corners. Carry your brushful of color all the way beyond the ridge of demarcation between lip tissue and skin with the final flourish of your brush, sweep clefts into fuller curves, and deepend the curve of your lower lip.

A beauty spot (cut from a page of black court plaster or dotted on with a sharp black eyebrow pencil) will point to a pretty mouth like a road-marker points to a curve.

Your lips will be soft, resilient and more responsive to art, says Factor, if you'll cream them at night, just as you do your face. To massage lips, open your mouth wide to form an "O", draw them tautly over your teeth, and with a fingertip, briskly rub your rich estrogenic face cream over their surface, first in one direction, then the other.

If you have an 8- or 9-inch skillet you can make individual omelets and fill them. Use three eggs, one tablespoon of light cream and 1/4 teaspoon of salt for each omelet and plenty of butter in the skillet.

SALAD DRESSINGS AND MAYONNAISE

There are weeks and months set aside for this and that but the whole year can be devoted to salads and keep your menus healthy and happy.

Nalley's, in its 40th year of good flavors, has been emphasizing its Specialty Dressings during this anniversary year. At the salad dressing counter at your grocer's, however, don't overlook Nalley's Sour Cream Dressing which is the perfect base of any number of dips for easy entertaining. (We still like to add finely chopped smoked oysters to a bottle of the dressing for one of the best and quickest dips possible).

Also, don't forget Nalley's Mayonnaise and Tang Salad Dressing.

Pacific Kitchen in Seattle, of which Mrs. Emma States is director, has a lot to say on the value of mayonnaise and salad dressings to the menu. Her report follows:

The versatility of these two products has been proven again and again in the kitchens of America. Mayonnaise and salad dressing have earned a place on the homemaker's shelf not only as an important ingredient in salads of all types, but as a flavorful part of sandwiches, dips, casseroles, and even desserts. To all kinds of dishes.

Hot applesauce is delightful with gingerbread warm from the oven; so is crushed pineapple that's been heated.

fer slightly in ingredients and method of preparation. Mayonnaise is an uncooked dressing, an emulsion made with eggs, oil, mayonnaise vinegar than mayonnaise and therefore mayonnaise milder and less tart than Salad Dressing, but each lend themselves to a large variety of variation and uses.

Following are three recipes which show the versatility of these dressings:

TANG-ASPARAGUS CASSEROLE
 8 hard-cooked eggs
 1/2 teaspoon Nalley's Prepared Mustard
 1/4 teaspoon celery salt
 1/4 cup Nalley's Tang Salad Dressing
 Few grains salt
 Few grains pepper
 3 tablespoons flour
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/4 cups milk

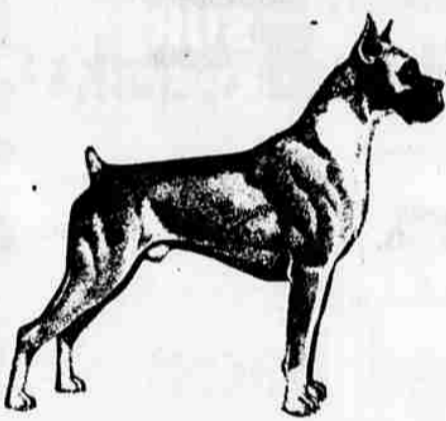

2 teaspoons chopped onion
 1/4 cup Nalley's Tang Salad Dressing
 1 package (3 1/2-oz.) Nalley's Potato Chips, crushed, (about 1 2-3 cups)
 2 No. 303 cans asparagus spears

23/4 cup boiling water
 1/2 cup Nalley's Mayonnaise
 1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
 2 oranges, cut in pieces
 1 box strawberries, sliced
 4 bananas, sliced

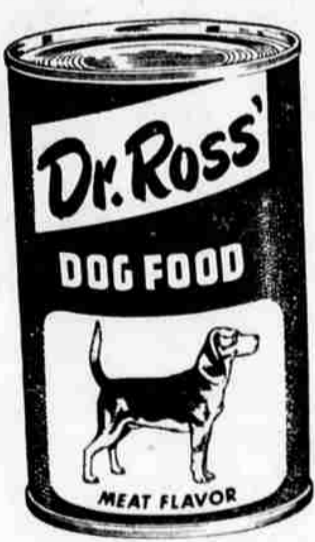

23/4 cup boiling water
 1/2 cup Nalley's Mayonnaise
 1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
 2 oranges, cut in pieces
 1 box strawberries, sliced
 4 bananas, sliced

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Cool and add Tang. Chill until consistency of egg whites and whip until light and fluffy. Fold in whipped cream and chill slightly. Fold in orange rind, orange pieces, strawberries and bananas. Pour into mold and chill until firm.
