Folk And Drinking Songs Enjoying New Popularity

By L. J. KRAMP

Folk songs by the Weavers and college songs—American and German—by the Blazers and the Vienna State Opera Male Chorus are among the fastest moving items on record dealer shelves today.

Perhaps it is a trend to group singing, or a new interest in the old songs, or a fad begun by college students. Others say it stems from the great regional, it not national, interest in "country" music. Whatever the reason, these vocal group discs are fine summer listening.

Folk songs have been growing in popularity since Burt Lyles put them on profitable records back in the early 1940s. But television appearances and a recorded concert, "The Weavers at Carnegie Hall," zoomed both group folk singing and the Weavers into prominence a year ago.

The Weavers began with "Good Night Irene" and "Zena, Zena" back in 1950. Their best selling Vanguard albums now include "The Weavers on Tour," and the third and latest, "The Weavers at Home."

The "Carnegie Hall" album is a taping of a 1955 Christmas Eve concert in their unique style, blues, western, or country. Three men and a girl, they twang one ballad, croon another, but always convey the words as well as an infectious rhythm.

The quartet includes Pete Seeger, a soloist on some folk records, who plays a long-neck banjo; Lee Hays, a rumbling-voiced ex-preacher; and Fred Hellerman and Ronnie Gilbert, blues and ballad soloists.

The "Carnegie" album includes "Darling Corey," "Kisses Sweeter Than Wine," and "Good Night Irene," plus 17 others. "On Tour," offers Irish railroad worker songs and sea chanteys and "Clementine," "At Home," the newest, is topped by "Aunt Rhodie," and "You Old Fool," plus some sad prison songs.

The Blazers are an unidentified male quartet whose first "College Drinking Sounds" was such a success that ABC Paramount lost no time getting out "More College Drinking Sounds," including a stereo version.

The selections range from the dreamy "Aura Lee" type to the more rollicking "Sweet Evaline," and "That's Where My Money Goes." But there also are the long-winded ballads such as "Abdullah Bulbul Amir" and "Thais."

Many of these are generations old, so there's nostalgia for the parents and novelty for the college boy who catches up with these.

"German University Songs" comes in two volumes, by Erich Kunz, baritone, and the Vienna State Opera Male Chorus and Orchestra, both by Vanguard. Kunz has sung at the Metropolitan Opera.

These are unqualified triumphs of recorded sound, with the second volume more lush, if less rollicking, than the first, which includes sparkling renditions of tavern ballads, love songs, patriotic and satiric tunes, and gay drinking music.

Volume II has more of the tragic ballads, the schmaltzy-horned hunting songs, and the beer-begotten student tributes to dark eyed maidens. It has appeal to collegians and hi-fi addicts but also the folk music buyers.

Rousingly sung, in German but with translation texts, they have rich orchestral and choral backgrounds. They make a pleasant diversion for summertime hi-fi listening.

America's Name Came From Man In Customs

NEW YORK (UPD) — America got its name from Richard Ameryk, a customs collector in Bristol, England, not from Amerigo Vespucci, according to Fitzroy W. G. Chamberlain, Lord Mayor of Bristol.

During a recent visit to New York, Chamberlain said explorer John Cabot named America after Ameryk to show his appreciation for the latter's successful efforts to get him a pension from Henry VII.

Cabot made his famous voyage of discovery in 1497 to what later became known as Newfoundland. Chamberlain's theory about how America got its name received no support from official sources.
