

A WARNING SIGN urging caution with fires is a real stopper at the Dairy Creek Guard Station turnoff. Here Ray Johnston moves up close to really soak up the message.

A BAND OF SHEEP on their high summer pasture caused a slight delay on the road when this picture was taken. The sheep were encountered not far beyond Finley Corrals on the trip.

FINLEY CORRALS is a familiar name in this part of the country and is the focal point of a lot of summer trips. This picture shows the station there, the pasture in the background. The station is beyond the Mitchell area on the Dairy Creek loop.

THIS BRONZE PLAQUE has been erected at the site of the only spot on the American continent where deaths occurred by enemy action during World War II. It is in the Mitchell Recreation Area some 13 miles from Bly.
