Lumber Firm Buys Timber

McCLOUD — Sale of the Rock Creek unit of National Forest timber in the McCLOUD Ranger District to the Lorenz Lumber Company of Burney, was announced by Shasta-Trinity Forest Supervisor Paul W. Statham. Oral auction bidding was held at the forest headquarters in Redding recently. High bids for the various species were: $39.75 per 1,000 board feet ponderosa and sugar pine; $8.15, white fir; $13.10, Douglas fir and $4.15 for incense cedar. Other bidders were the McCLOUD River Lumber Company, Chiloquin Timber Company of Klamath Falls, and Scott Lumber Company of Burney. Approximately 16 million board feet of timber was cruised in the unit. G. C. Lorenz, president of the Lorenz Lumber Company, stated he hoped to start logging on the unit this fall. The timber will be manufactured at the plant north of Burney. The Lookout Point unit comprising 10 1/2 million board feet of predominantly white fir will be sold at an oral auction in Redding October 6. Timber cruisers, under the direction of McCLOUD Ranger District assistant ranger, Dave Scott, are presently cruising between 10 and 12 million feet of timber adjoining the Lookout Point unit.

Lakeview Lodge Holds Meeting

NEW PINE CREEK—Members of Lakeview Lodge No. 63, International Order of Odd Fellows, held a special meeting Friday evening honoring State Grand Master Wilford Beard of Salem. The meeting was preceded by a banquet at Van's. Beard took his motto, "Take Time," as the theme of his speech. The Paisley lodge honored the grand master on Saturday night. Beard praised the small lodges at that time, saying the percentage of attendance is usually higher than in the larger ones. He also stated that he regarded the smaller lodges as indispensable to the well-being of the order. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

C. B. Stephenson, president, First National Bank of Oregon, is chairman of the governor's new sub-committee named to study possible legislation to permit Oregon to take advantage of provisions of the new Small Business Act of 1958, recently signed by the President, which permits industrial groups to borrow federal funds for the purpose of assisting small business in development and expansion.

Oregon's tourist income climbed to approximately $150 million during 1958, the highest ever recorded, according to the state highway department's travel information division which conducts a survey each year among tourists at 17 checking stations at points of entry to Oregon. This record compares with $130 million in 1957 and $141 million in 1956, previous high years. There were more than 1,800,000 out-of-state cars entering Oregon, carrying an average of 3.2 persons each and remaining in Oregon almost four days. Car-borne tourists spent more than $135 million and those arriving by train, bus and airplane swelled the total with another $15 million. The expenditure per person per day also increased from $5.20 last year to $6.16 this year. California remains the high point of origin for Oregon tourists with 43 per cent.

Washington second with 23 per cent. The state's travel information division has predicted an increase for the 1959 centennial year of at least 29 per cent. The seventh annual Better Business Relations conference is being held at Gearhart this week starting today and running through Oct. 9. Among the out-of-town speakers will be Dr. Ralph G. Nichols, head of the communications program of University of Minnesota, and Allen K. Heydrick, communications expert for the Liko-Belt Co., Chicago. The conference is sponsored jointly by the U.S. Chamber and Portland chamber of commerce.

Fewer porcupine noses are being turned in to the county clerk's office this year than last, according to Dorothy Rogers of County Clerk Charles F. DeLap's office. September closed with just over 5000 noses having been counted, leaving well over half of the $6000 bounty money still unclaimed. Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. foresters said early in the season that porcupine populations north and west of Klamath Falls had been decimated by last year's bounty program and the best porcupine hunting this year is in the area lying east of town.

Oregon walnut growers expect a favorable market for their 6,000 tons of walnuts this year, according to Glenn W. Hansberry, manager of Salem Nut Growers, Inc., 2828 Cherry Ave. NE, Salem. Wider distribution of Oregon walnuts and liberts and constant improvement in the quality of these nuts are the main goals of the Salem Nut Growers who distributed thousands of walnut cookie recipes at the state fair this year.

No. 6 in a Series on National Newspaper Week

87 Employees Work Together To Bring You The Newspaper!

That's right! It takes a team of 87 regular employes (74 full time and 13 part time) to produce your daily newspaper.

And that figure doesn't include the 125 carrier boys who deliver the paper from the press to you, nor the two dozen correspondents who cover the news within a 125 mile radius of Klamath Falls.

The annual payroll is approximately $425,000. Herald and News employes spend locally more for goods and services than the paper takes in from all local advertisers. The difference is "outside" money from national advertisers.

It is estimated that the Herald and News and its personnel annually pay $30,321 in county property taxes alone.

The Herald and News is in its second year of a modernization program. Over $300,000 is being invested in plant equipment to better serve its customers.

Yes, the Herald and News ranks high on the list of the Basin's leading firms — in payroll, in investment, in service, and in interest.

No other private business is so public! The existence of the Herald and News is justified only by the service that it renders to you — the subscriber and the advertiser.

In the past few years you have been introduced to the personnel in the paper's principal departments: News, Advertising, Mechanical, Circulation.

Today we present the final group that makes up the Herald and News family.

This is National Newspaper Week. We're glad to have had the excuse to say, "Howdy." We'd like to add the invitation to come in and see us personally.

Look to the Future...

As the Klamath Basin Grows, the Herald and News pledges itself to grow, too.

The Klamath Basin — and the Herald and News — now is launched on its greatest period of growth.

The Herald and News pledges itself to complete service in this era — to greater circulation heights, and to better advertising service.

The Herald and News will continue to be YOUR paper! It will continue to be the basic advertising and news medium.

It does not have to compete with other human interests and activities for your attention. It always is at hand waiting to be read at YOUR convenience — as you are doing now!
