Mushroom Farm In Old Mine Thrives

SANTA FE, N. M. (UPI)—Lake Roy, 42, a former New Yorker, runs a mushroom farm 200 feet below the surface of the earth in an abandoned coal mine 20 miles south of Santa Fe.

He has been at it four months and can't fill the orders that come in at $3.50 a pound. Roy may have the best-paying coal mine in the state.

He had bought and cooked mushrooms for 20 years as a chef when he decided to raise them. His boss thought he was crazy. But he has been so successful that one buyer has tried to contract for his entire crop at a premium price. Roy turned him down.

"So I make real good for a year or two," he said. "Then what if they cancel on me? I'd a lot rather have 13 small accounts than one big one."

Roy thinks mushroom raising is easy in a mine like this. "I've got a beautiful strain of pink mushroom," he said. "They're much more succulent than those pale white ones you get all the time."
