Oregon Governor Holmes Behind Route Development

The long-standing effort to develop a direct route from U.S. 40 through Southern Oregon to the coast was given some support by Governor Holmes on his visit here last week. Asked by County Judge Charlie Mack about his stand on the proposal, Holmes was quoted, "I'll get right on it." Advocates in Southern Oregon, particularly in Lake and Klamath counties, long have sought a route cutting through Northern Nevada and Southern Oregon. This would eliminate the need for travelers to dip into California before heading east from here or arriving here from the east. The proposed route has been called the "Winnemucca-to-the-Sea Highway."

Local Hunter Still Critical

Leon James Richardson, 35, head of the appliance department of the local Montgomery Ward store, was still in serious condition in Providence Hospital at Portland this morning, according to a report from the Associated Press bureau at Portland. Richardson was flown from Lakeview to Portland Monday by Mercy Flight in order that he might have the care of specialists. He was shot through the chest by a .270 caliber rifle at a distance of some 300 yards late Sunday afternoon, according to Lake County Sheriff Tom Elliott. The bullet went completely through his body, struck a rock, ricocheted and fragmented the rock caused minor head injuries to Mrs. Elaine Randolph who, with her husband, was a member of Richardson's hunting party. The accident occurred about 5:10 p.m. near Rowers Creek, northwest of Lakeview. Mrs. Richardson is with her husband in Portland and their son, Norman Leon Richardson, who had accompanied his father on the deer hunting trip has returned to Klamath Falls. He is with Mrs. Richardson's sister. Sheriff Elliott and Lake County District Attorney Julian Herndon are investigating the circumstances surrounding the shooting. The shot was fired by Bert Moore, 46, a Lakeview timber feller, who was with another hunting party, according to officers.
