Students Of Clinton High Return To Makeshift Rooms

CLINTON, Tenn. (AP) — Students of Clinton High School return to makeshift, integrated classes today pending transfer — probably Thursday — to a vacated school building at nearby Oak Ridge.

Meanwhile, the Anderson County School Board voted in executive session to send three of its members to Washington later this week for a conference with President Eisenhower on the Clinton problem.

"We're sending three members," said School Supt. James A. Newman, "but we don't know which three or what we will say to the President. We're still working on procedure."

Three pre-dawn explosions rocked the high school last Sunday, wrecking the interior. Damage has been estimated at $300,000.

Sixteen student leaders from Asia, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America recently arrived in the United States for a year of studies at American colleges and universities. In turn, American students are enrolled at the foreign universities from which these sixteen student leaders were selected.

Since then, rewards totaling more than $60,000 have been offered for the arrest and conviction of those responsible.

As FBI and local authorities investigate the bombing, the 850 white and 11 Negro students will attend classes in the undamaged gymnasium, an elementary school the city recreation center and a National Guard armory.

Linden Elementary School, where the students will be transferred, is six miles to the west at Oak Ridge. The school, which had been vacant, was made available by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Clinton High School was integrated racially in 1956 under federal court orders, and became the first state-supported high school in Tennessee to mix the races. Sporadic violence accompanied the first year of race mixing, but last year and this had been quiet.
