

Cleric Sees Victory For Integration

Present trends are favorable for a fairly early victory of integration in the South, the Rev. Glenn E. Smiley, national field secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, said Tuesday evening in a talk at the Congregational Church.

The Texas-born speaker, whose role in the Little Rock controversy has included the conduct of a workshop in which Negro youngsters attending Central High School tried to find non-violent ways of dealing with the violence to which they were subjected, told his listeners that he was taken in by the "superficially discouraging" signs of the past five weeks. He said that "on a deeper level" there had been real encouragement for integrationists during this period.

This encouragement is due in part to the pressures which exist for getting children back to school in Little Rock and other areas where schools are closed. Mothers want to get their children out from under foot, and students do not want their high schools to be closed long enough to lose accreditation. Thus, according to Smiley, many whites who are not integrationists do not believe that segregation is worth the price they are paying, especially since many of the segregationist leaders admit privately that integration is inevitable.

These more or less incidental factors pushing for integration are reinforced by more important considerations, the speaker said. Primary among these is the "wonderful" way in which Negroes have behaved during this controversy.

"There has been no fighting in the South between whites and Negroes," Smiley said, "apart from a few Little Rock high school students. However, there has been fighting between whites."

This absence of fighting has largely overcome some of the whites' fears, which Smiley called irrational, of "ignorant Negroes." The Negroes have not only shown their maturity, but in many instances have been able to meet hate with love, Smiley said. Although he didn't claim that integration would be achieved in a year or two, he said that this attitude of love, which is reciprocal on the part of an increasing number of white people, was the greatest hope for the South. Indeed, "Love, the Greatest Power," was the subject of his talk.

Smiley's appearance here was sponsored by the Klamath Council of Churches, the Klamath Falls Chapter NAACP and the Unitarian Fellowship of Klamath County.

KF Air Chief Given Post

Harold G. Jones, manager of the municipal airport, was reelected secretary-treasurer at the recent convention of the International Northwest Aviation Council held in Billings, Montana.

Delegates to the convention selected Portland as the site for their 1959 convention.

Other officers serving with Jones are Gene Waddle, Portland, president; George Shoemaker, Spokane, national vice president; Halford Wilson, Vancouver, B.C., vice president; and Arnold Hein, Vancouver, Washington, director.

The council passed two resolutions dealing with international air travel. One asked resumption of bilateral discussions in an effort to establish better air routes, and the second urged action by the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the Canadian Ministry of Air Transport on a number of proposed routes.

History Groups Plan Symposium

The eighth annual symposium for the Northern California and Southern Oregon Historical Societies will be held for the first time in Klamath Falls, October 2, 3 and 4, 1953. This will be one of the outstanding historical meets to be held in the West next year. Announcement of plans for bringing the historical groups together here was made by Ken McLeod, president of the Klamath County Historical Society.

The symposium will deal with local and regional history of the areas from Tuolumne County, south of the San Francisco Bay Area and throughout the Northwest. The Klamath County Historical Society will host the meeting.

A series of papers will be presented with the tentative program schedule to include an introduction to the Klamath Basin, covering industry, agriculture and recreation. Others will deal with the Klamath Indians, the Modoc War, pioneers and settlement of the region. Time will also be devoted to discussions of the problems confronting historical societies and work accomplished.

LANGUAGE CLASSES
CHILQUIN — It has been announced that language classes in the Klamath Indian tongue, which have been taught for several months, are still open to any interested person who wishes to begin study. The group is taught by Martha Nelson and Flava Yates once every other week. Further information can be obtained by contacting either the education office or Mrs. Leonard Norris in Chilquin.

During the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, the area of national forests was increased from 43 million to 194 million acres.
