DAC Hold Luncheon

Klamath Chapter, Daughters of the Colonists, opened the fall season with a 1 o'clock luncheon at the Pelican party room Saturday, September 27.

Lovely table decorations, consisting of a long, low centerpiece at the head table and tiny bowls set in copper bases along the side tables, were provided and arranged by Mrs. Richard Henzel who utilized autumn flowers from her own garden.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. Eugene Favell, accompanied by Mrs. George McIntyre, sang some beautiful songs in keeping with the autumn theme; Tyson's "Like Barley Bending," "Serenata" by Tosti and "In Autumn" by Curran.

Mrs. Arch G. Proctor, chapter regent, introduced the state vice-regent, Mrs. Owen Rhoads and state regent, Mrs. John Y. Richardson.

Mrs. Rhoads spoke to the group about the state project of the society for the centennial year of Oregon's statehood, which is the placing of a marker in some historical spot to be determined later. She mentioned for consideration the site of the old Newmarket Theater in Portland, the grave of Sen. James Nesmith on his donation land claim, and the site of the early newspaper. The Oregon Statesman.

Mrs. Richardson gave a most informative talk on the purposes and projects of the National Society of the Daughters of the Colonists, stressing the need for constant vigilance to maintain our constitutional government. She has recently been appointed national chairman on resolutions for the organization and informed the group that all resolutions pertaining to national welfare are sent to the White House and to Congress. She pointed out many worth while projects which could be undertaken by local and state groups, among them being the copying of church records where available. She particularly stressed the need for a state wide cataloging of all markers put up by various societies.
