Diamond Expert Has Rock Problem

NEW YORK (UPD) — Success isn't spoiling rock hunters, but it is complicating the professional life of William D. Schnorr.

Gem expert for famed Tiffany's on Fifth Avenue, Schnorr now is an unwilling collector of worthless rocks. That's because he has been deluged with "finds" from some 150 amateur prospectors.

The avalanche from all parts of the country, began after a magazine (True) reported that observant Americans can discover precious and semiprecious stones, including even diamonds. Tiffany's was mentioned for identifying gem bonanzas stumbled over by amateurs in past years.

Now Schnorr and Tiffany's are holding on to much of the odd collection, mainly plain rocks or common minerals. Schnorr informs each prospector that his find is valueless and requests return postage or permission to dispose of the rocks, which weigh as much as five pounds.

Most luckless prospectors lose interest when they find the get-rich-quick idea has faded. They fail to reply, Schnorr is keeping the rocks on hand, but out of sight, to guard against the possibility of any law suit.

He urges all rock hunters to please send their discoveries to state geologists.

MADE WORK

AMESBURY, Mass. (UPD) — "Got to keep busy," explained Joseph E. Trombla when he was asked why he spent his 93rd birthday shingling the roof of his garage and repairing some chairs.
