Astute Political Expert Sees Ohio Voting Shocker

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Richard L. Maher, the astute political expert of the Cleveland Press, believes Ohio voters are about to come up with another union labor shocker like their whopping 1950 reelection of Sen. Robert A. Taft.

The shocker this time would be approval of a constitutional amendment forbidding the union shop in Ohio. This is a right-to-work proposal which organized labor is trying mightily to kill.

Taft's reelection in 1950 by a margin of 400,000 votes made the senator Mr. Republican to one and all and almost propelled him into the White House. The Republican politician who stands to benefit the most if Ohio goes for right-to-work next month is Ohio's 42-year-old governor, C. William O'Neill, a Phi Beta Kappa and a Baptist.

O'Neill got his reelection campaign off the ground some weeks ago with a public endorsement of right-to-work. The blast-off was so successful that it enabled O'Neill to gain and, so far, to hold the campaign offensive.

That is the report of Ohio observers who, like the late Sen. Arthur Capper (R-Kan.) are credited with the ability to keep both ears to the ground.

Telephone returns to O'Neill on his endorsement of right-to-work have been impressively favorable.

So the young governor has made that his major campaign issue. He tells the voters that right-to-work combines an affirmative position on man's fundamental freedom of choice and on the anti-corruption issue as it relates to organized labor. There is evidence that the issue is popular and that O'Neill may overcome the Ohio political tradition against reelecting Republican governors.

O'Neill's Democratic opponent is Michael V. Di Salle, one-time chief of the federal Office of Price Administration. Mike Di Salle was one of the most attractive and politically adept of the many able men brought into Washington during the Roosevelt and Truman administrations. O'Neill licked Di Salle in 1956 for a two-year term. His vote bulge was nearly 430,000.

The contest now is for Ohio's first four-year term. There can be no fluke about it if O'Neill defeats Di Salle and if right-to-work carries. Mike is an able campaigner, although now thrown off stride by O'Neill's surprise opposition to the union shop. The unions are making a real fight to defeat the amendment.

Ohio seems to be a fairer test of right-to-work sentiment than is likely to be had this year in California where the Republican fighting front is a shambles and the principal candidates hostile each to the other. O'Neill crossed other top level Ohio Republicans on the right-to-work issue but, apparently, without seriously fracturing party unity.

An O'Neill-for-president movement calculated to attract wide conservative support will be almost automatic if he is reelected and the right-to-work amendment is approved in Ohio. The spotlight would be hard on him and his performance during the next two years as Republicans maneuvered toward their 1960 nominating convention.

On the record so far, O'Neill must be given good marks as a politician. He should know the game after long service in the Ohio Legislature. The party pros as well as the unhappy party conservatives might be attracted to O'Neill.

An interesting footnote to the Ohio campaign is the thought that Negroes may vote for right-to-work. There has been union discrimination against them in Ohio.

Funeral Services Planned For First County Nurse

Mrs. Lydia Fricke Howard, 79, a resident of Klamath County since 1925 and this county's first health nurse, died at Hillside Hospital on October 13. She had been ill only a short time and death apparently was caused by a heart condition.

Mrs. Howard, a native of Missouri, born October 8, 1879, came to Oregon in 1921 after graduation as a nurse. She served overseas in World War I, first in France and later in Germany with the occupation forces, serving both as an Army nurse and with the American Red Cross.

Soon after her arrival here, the late Dr. George Merryman set up the first public health unit and Mrs. Howard, then Lydia Fricke, became a health nurse, traveling to outposts of the county, to lumber camps, schools and to private homes in her fight against disease and illness.

She was married in 1937 to Mark Howard who died about seven years ago. The family home is on Summers Lane.

Mrs. Howard, who resigned her position with the county in 1946, continued interest in young women taking nursing as a career. Those who care to may contribute to a memorial nursing scholarship in her memory. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Eleanor Ball, treasurer of the Oregon State Nurses' Association, Chapter No. 8, Klamath Falls, of which she was a member.

Mrs. Howard was also a member of Zion Lutheran Church, the Klamath Falls Business and Professional Women's Club, and had served as chairman of the Edith Cumming Book Club.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday, October 15, at 2 p.m. in Ward's Klamath Funeral Home with the Rev. H. M. Waraker, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church officiating. Final rites and interment will be in Linkville Cemetery.

Survivors include one sister, Mrs. Laura Briggs, Beardstown, Illinois, who is here for the services, and several nieces and nephews.

Science Show Set By Club

A popular science show, complete with demonstrations designed to explain such ordinary puzzling developments in science as electronics, solar energy, radiation, space travel and the like will be presented for members of the Knife and Fork Club Tuesday evening at 6:30 at the Willard Hotel.

Putting on the show will be Glenn L. Morris, nationally known creator of popular science shows and a veteran of more than 20 years on a circuit that has taken him to practically every nook and cranny of the country.

Morris is carrying with him on the tour a series of gadgets he uses liberally in his demonstrations. One of his practical demonstrations is that of showing how a plane follows a beam to its ultimate goal.

He demonstrates and explains the modern miracles of solar energy, radiation, electronics and other achievements in the field of science and scientific research.

Ross Ragland, president, will conduct the meeting. Gene Favell is chairman.

The invocation will be by Rev. Lloyd Henderson of Merrill.

Hunters Keep Good Record

Hunters, and other woods tramplers, earned a vote of gratitude Monday for preserving a good fire record.

No fires were reported over the weekend by either the KFPA or the Forest Service.

There were fires, however, but they weren't near forests.

The county and OTI fire departments were called to a hillside on U.S. 97 North, where a shack burned down and started a grass fire. The fire was reported at 11:12 a.m. Sunday on a hillside opposite the intersection of Rattle Street and Kit Carson Way northeast of the gravel pits. The owner of the unoccupied building was not known.

Another shed, owned by Joe Evans, 835 Alameda Avenue, caught fire about half an hour earlier. The county department said some plywood in the building was charred but otherwise damage was slight.

Two flooded oil stoves required attention from the city fire department over the weekend. They were at Brothers Sewing Appliance Mart, 345 East Main Street, at 9:42 a.m. Sunday, and at the home of Mary Hale, 2151 Gettle Street, at 8:18 p.m. Sunday. Neither place had caught fire.

Grass and scrap lumber were burned in the yard of C. W. Clifford, 2224 Maryland Avenue, at 2:01 Sunday afternoon. Several buildings were endangered but no serious damage was reported by the city department.

Another grass fire, without damage, was reported at the residence of Gary Dodds, 3000 Summers Lane, at 2:40 p.m. Sunday.

Safety Program Near Completion

The Lite-A-Bike safety campaign will be completed for this year when Exchange Club members will appear at eight elementary schools Tuesday.

Students at the eight schools are asked to bring their bikes with them Tuesday. Exchange Club members, with the cooperation of school officials and city police, will affix light-reflecting safety stickers on each bike—two white stickers in front and one red sticker in the rear.

Schools where stickers will be attached are Sacred Heart, Conger, Fairview, Fremont, Mills, Riverside, Roosevelt and Pondorosa.

Parents are asked to remind their youngsters to take the bike along Tuesday. The program, now in its ninth year, opened at seven elementary schools last week.

CORINNE SHOREY

Agency Girl Crash Victim

KLAMATH AGENCY — Corinne Dorothy Shorey, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Shorey of Klamath Agency, lost her life in an automobile accident near Green Bay, Wisconsin, while on a September vacation visiting relatives. The accident occurred on September 28 when the car in which she was riding became involved in a collision. Miss Shorey lived 12 hours.

Her parents went to Wisconsin by plane and returned to Klamath County Thursday from Gallup, New Mexico, where funeral services had been held on October 3. Vault entombment was in Sunset Memorial Park at Gallup.

Mr. and Mrs. Shorey came to Oregon from New Mexico and have lived at Klamath Agency for the last 18 years. He is an engineer's aide for the roads department and Mrs. Shorey is a real property officer, both with the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Their daughter was graduated from Chiloquin High School and had attended school at San Jose. She was a member of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church of Chiloquin.

In addition to her parents, survivors include two sisters, Mrs. Homo (Virginia) Williams of Klamath Agency and Mrs. Robert (Jacqueline) Llewellyn of Menlo Park, California; also one niece, Susan Mary Williams and three nephews, John Lewis Williams, Norman Jeff Llewellyn and George Lawrence Llewellyn.

One Injured In Headon

Apparently only one person was injured in a headon auto collision on Washburn Way at 6:20 a.m. Sunday, state police reported.

Floyd William Moak, 2329 Applegate Street, Klamath Falls, was admitted to Klamath Valley Hospital and Monday was reported in fairly good condition with a fractured leg and several broken ribs.

Police said Moak's car veered left on the highway and struck a car operated by Bernard P. Rochon, 717 Lincoln Street, Klamath Falls.

Both cars were extensively damaged. Officers said Moak was cited for failing to drive on the right side of the road.

A freak accident frightened, but apparently did not injure, four OTI students driving on State 66 beyond the Lakeview Junction at 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

State police said a wheel fell off the trailer of a truck-trailer unit operated by Mike Edward Kosarell, 31, Los Angeles, and smacked into a car driven by Gerald Ray Rithenner, 19, of OTI.

No injuries were reported, although Rithenner had three passengers with him: William Furrow, 19, Henry Richardson, 18, and Carl S. Esser, 24, all OTI students.

Officers said the truck driver was unaware that his trailer had lost a wheel and had driven several miles before a motorist, who had seen the accident, caught up to tell him about it.

The only West Virginian who served as Postmaster General of the United States was William L. Wilson, who originated the system of rural free delivery.
