INFORMATION, PLEASE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Telephone Reference Division of the Brooklyn Public Library has come up with a list of books that need writing. The library provides answers to more than 100 queries a day, but has found two subjects for which hardly any reference material is available. What this country needs, said the library, is a "really good book of wedding toasts for the distracted best man" and another book listing the altitudes of resort spots.

Here's How To Scare Rattlers

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Bits of charcoal soaked in "synthetic skunk juice" may be just the thing to keep rattlesnakes away from your campsite or dwelling, according to a snake expert at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. Raymond B. Cowles said a chemical known as mercaptan, which has an odor almost identical to but not quite as unpleasant as that of a skunk, frightens rattlesnakes.

The studies suggest that bits of charcoal, soaked in mercaptan solution and scattered around a campsite or a dwelling in snake-infested areas, have a strong enough odor to keep rattlers away but are still not too unpleasant for humans.
